This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Greeting

THE Michiganensian of Nineteen Hundred and Ten is before you.

We have tried to record in permanent form the happenings of our college days.

No one realizes more than we do how far we have come from making it complete.

The book is finished, and, such as it is, we send it forth, to success or failure.

If it pleases you, we are satisfied.

The Home of the University

THERE are times when a traveler toiling up a mountain suddenly reaches a warm, sheltered peak whence he can survey the valley far below him. He lays aside his burden, wipes the sweat from his eyes and views the landscape. Gradually, insensibly, his tired muscles relax. He forgets the lofty, ice-clad peaks he still must scale and lets his fancy wander back to the lowly valley whence he came. So shall we today, from our sheltered coign of vantage, look back over the path this great institution of ours has traveled and from the difficulties which have been surmounted in the past take renewed courage to meet the trials of the future and renewed appreciation of this beautiful home of ours.

In the daily routine of our work we are apt to forget how beautiful is the home of this University. Our hearts thrill when we hear "Old Harvard" and "Fair Cornell" immortalized in song and story. Antiquity lends romance, even as distance lends a charm. Our alma mater is not as old as some of the time-honored colleges of the east and we should be glad that it is so. We are, in comparison with Harvard, still in our youth. But what a gay and buoyant youth it is! And what a glorious home in which to expand and grow strong!. Go out on the hills that girt us round on every side, follow the Huron where it winds between its terraced heights, go out into the country and look across fields growing green in the springtime sun and ask where could be found a fairer dwelling place? Loiter beneath Ann Arbor's pines and elms, linger through the campus when the dome on University Hall glows with the light of the setting sun and the library chimes play their silvery tune, and try to conjure up a more idyllic place in which to study and "trace the stream of learning to its source."

It is fitting that such a University should be builded here, a University whose keystone is democracy and whose gates stand open for all to enter. There would be something incongruous about having such an institution in a city, where life is congested and distinctions of class are closely drawn. But here where life is untrammeled and things are new, liberty in its broadest sense has found a dwelling place, liberty which eternally battles against caste and unjust discrimination.

We who enjoy the beauties of this college town often forget how this fair home came into our possession. As we read the story of that early time a singularly pathetic interest attaches to the event. The Chippewas, Ottawas and Pottawatomies were disappearing. Before the onslaught of the whites their vaunted power was fast being overthrown and the forests they had once called their own were falling under the axes of the conquerors. There gradually grew in the mind of these simple red men a realization of the fact that the superior training and science of the whites enabled them to prevail over the red man's undirected daring and courage. The silent arrow of the Indian was no match for the white man's thunderous fire arms. The wild sortie availed little against the ranks of firm, well-dis iplined fighting men. So it came to pass that by the Treaty of Fort Meigs, in the year 1817, the Ottawas, Chippewas and Pottawatomies gave six sections of land to the white men. By the terms of the agreement, these six sections were to be divided between the Church of St. Anne, in Detroit, and what was called the College of Detroit, the ancestor of the University of Michigan. This land was granted by the Indians in the hope that perhaps some of their ancestors might attend this institution of white men's learning and receive the education and scientific training that had made the white man all powerful. Additional pathos is connected with the event because there is no record of a full-blooded Indian of any of these tribes who has received his education at the University.

We are able to appreciate much more fully our present home by contrasting with it the beginnings of the University. In the present age of comfort and even luxury, it is almost impossible for us to realize the privations and sacrifices of our ancestors. We, who nowadays nonchalantly press a button and flood our study room with electric light, find it hard to believe that less than a century ago our forefathers studied by the light of smoky, evil-smelling tallow candles.

History shows us that even before the State of Michigan had a separate existence, when it was still a part of that vast Northwest Territory whose boundaries were so vaguely drawn, plans for the establishment of a great State University were being formulated. As early as 1817, twenty years before Michigan was admitted into the Union as a state, the governor and judges of the Territory passed an act for the establishment of the University of Michigan. In 1821 was formed the University of Michigan at Detroit. This act created the University as "a body politic and corporate." In 1837, the year that Michigan was admitted to the Union, the State Legislature passed an act for the organization of the University of Michigan. The next year this act became the law of the State and by its terms the University came into being. In March, 1838, the state loaned the Regents the sum of one hundred thousand dollars. It was resolved in September of the same year that eight sections of the north wing be immediately commenced. Months of wearying delay passed and it was not until the 8th of April, 1840, that the plan for the main building, now the north wing, was adopted. The estimated cost of the building was to be sixteen thousand dollars. It was to be one hundred and ten feet long, forty-two feet wide and four stories in height. As originally planned, it was to contain thirty-two studies, an equal number of wood rooms, sixty-four bedrooms and sixty-four closets. The forty acres which were appropriated to the University were partially cleared of stumps at a cost of three hundred and forty-six dollars and eighty-one cents and building commenced.

The University formally opened its doors in September, 1841. Truly it was a time of small beginnings. One dormitory building, which served in the three-fold capacity of chapel, recitation and sleeping rooms, and four dwelling houses for the professors summed up the building of the University. A library of considerably less than four thousand books, a cabinet of five thousand five hundred specimens in zoology, eight thousand in minerology, ten thousand in geology and fifteen thousand in botany summed up the material that had been gathered through long years of preparation.

It is almost ludicrous to read the press accounts of the infancy of the University. The Michigan State Journal, bearing the date of August 10, 1841, proudly says: "The main building is four stories high, built of brick, handsome and durably stuccoed so as to give it very nearly the appearance of Quincey granite. Besides this, four professors' buildings of the same material are furnished. More classical models or a more beautiful finish cannot be imagined. They honor the architect, while they beautify the village."

Despite "the classical models and the beautiful finish" we find that in that memorable September, seventy-nine years ago, the University of Michigan welcomed to its portals but six students, five freshmen and one sophomore. The faculty consisted of two men, Professor Whiting and Doctor Williams. From such humble beginnings has the University grown to its present enviable position among the educational schools of the world.

Simple, indeed, was the machinery by which the infant University was run. We cannot refrain from smiling when we read in the chronicles of those early times that "the professors took turns in being President." And as we survey the campus, as it is now with its thousands of students hurrying to and from their classes, with its mighty buildings and shaded walks, it is hard for us to realize that a little over seventy years ago, six students represented the entire enrollment at the University. I wonder if that one poor sophomore ever attempted to stop the freshman banquet?

Contrast the home of the University in September, 1841, with what it is now! Ann Arbor was then a tiny village in a vast, undeveloped state which had just been admitted into the Union. A typical village of the early times it was, with its little stores and quaint vine-shaded homes. No shriek of locomotive or clang of cars disturbed the quiet of its sleepy streets. No yell of victory from twenty thousand throats broke the stillness of that village.

If one of the six pioneer students should wander back today, would he recognize this busy town of Ann Arbor as being the new home of that infant University he attended four-score years ago? The same Huron flows between the same terraced hills, the same sun and moon look down upon the passing pageant of the years, but a newer and broader home is ours. We no longer live in a little village in the Michigan woods. Our home has grown as we have grown. All the opportunities the modern world affords are ours; all the refining influences of the broader, freer age in which we live. The beauties of nature have been preserved, while the restricted outlook of the pioneer days has been widened and clarified with the passing years.

A beautiful home, it is one to be proud of and to cherish. We can say with the poet—

> "Be it ours to meditate,
> In these calm shades, thy milder majesty,
> And to the beautiful order of thy works
> Learn to conform the order of our lives."—W. W. O.

Meditation

One night I sat in dreamy mood
And smoked my pipe reflectively,
When, breaking through the solitude,
The Campus clock boomed vibrantly.
I counted twelve—the midnight hour,
And meditation like a cloud
Enveloped me with all its power,
Shut out the world with its soft shroud.

I dreamed of all the golden days
That in the halls of Michigan
Had passed as in a golden haze—
A glamor one can ne'er forget.
The ivied walls rose in my view
As dear, as old familiar friends,
And tho' I loved them, yet I knew
That such a friendship sometimes ends.

I knew that when my fourth brief year
Had hurried to its sudden close,
Despite the sudden parting drear;
Through all my life I'd smell that rose—
That rose of College life that mounts
Like incense through our future lives,
And, rain or sunshine, ever counts
To him who knows the world and strives.

And so I dreamed; and, dreaming, thought
Of all the mem'ries, sacred, dear,
That only living them has brought
What will not die for many a year;
Within our hearts a bud is set,
A bud of love that breathes and grows—
The love we bear to Michigan,
Surpassing every flower that blows.

The Past Year

By Arthur J. Abbott, '09-'11 L.

DR. Edward E. Slosson in his treatises on American Universities speaks of the situation at Michigan, Harvard and Minnesota as, in a certain sense, critical, owing to the significant changes in the administration of these universities during past year. However this may be, it is certain that from a Michigan standpoint at least, nineteen hundred nine has been pre-eminently a year of transition in all departments of University activity. A general awakening of alumni interest leading to the appointment of a permanent alumni "improvement committee"; a well defined extension of faculty influence in the direction of more adequate control of undergraduate activities; a general progressive spirit in the administrative councils of the university; and, lastly, the initation of great projects for the betterment of undergraduate life—the enumeration of these is but to indicate the general trend of events in a year replete with change.

By far the most significant change in American Universities during the past year, was the retirement of the three oldest and most experienced University presidents, Eliot of Harvard at the age of seventy-five after twenty-five years of service; Northrup of Minnesota at the age of seventy-five after twenty-five years of service; and Dr. Angell at the age of eighty-one years after thirty-eight years as President of the University of Michigan. During Dr. Angell's administration, Michigan has grown to be the greatest commonwealth university and at the present time has more undergraduate students in its regular session than any educational institution in the United States. Its alumni body numbering approximately thirty thousand, is the largest in the country and has representatives in the United States Supreme Court, in the highest state tribunals, in the chairs of great universities and in places of high responsibility in every walk of life throughout the world.

The alumni are the "back bone" of a university and it is therefore of extraordinary significance to chronicle the fact that a definite plan of alumni organization has been evolved during the past year, along lines such as were discussed by Professor James R. Angell at the Michigan Union Banquet of last fall. The scope of this article does not permit of an extended survey of the service which may inure to the University from the organization of Michigan Alumni; but among the benefits which may and should readily flow from such an effort are: First, the formation of public opinion leading to more favorable appreciation of the needs of the university in the legislature; Second, the awakening of alumni to the need for gifts and endowments from wealthy graduates: Third, suggestions for improvement in the organization, administration and instruction of the University; Fourth, the insurance of alumni aid in great student enterprises, such as the raising of funds for the proposed Union Club House. President Lane of the Alumni Association has appointed a committee of twenty-one representative alumni with Professor James R. Angell as chairman, and the progress of this body, fraught, as it is, with consideration of such tremendous importance, will be observed with interest.

A new institution which intimately involves the whole stratum of undergraduate organization is the Board in Control of Student Activities. This body requires each student society to file articles of "incorporation" as a condition precedent to its existence and has the power to dissolve such organizations as it considers unnecessary or deleterious adjuncts of University life. Some have been inclined to criticise this innovation because it smacks of paternalism and "red tape"; but, nevertheless, it is certain to exert a most salutary influence on student life. Although the university with its one-hundred, seventy-six student organizations is probably not over-organized, and although, according to statistics, only one-tenth of the undergraduates are identified with organization life, yet there is a strong tendency for mushroom societies of doubtful merit to spring up overnight and this tendency senate supervision should effectually curb. Moreover, such regulation lends greater dignity to those organizations which have passed the scrutiny of the university authorities and been presented with a clean bill of health. Worthy student organizations should welcome the change.

Another faculty institution, which has been initiated in recognition of the lack of personal relation between the faculty and undergraduates, is the freshman advisory system. At the beginning of the school year, the entire Freshman literary class was entertained at Barbour Gymnasium where the first year students became acquainted with their advisors and with each other. The distinct aid which the advisory board aims to furnish these students is: First, counsel in the election of their studies; Second, to advise delinquent students, and, if possible, ascertain the cause of their inability to do satisfactory work; Third, in general, to break down the divergence between students and faculty, and to make the faculty appear less a teaching machine and more a body of co-workers in the interest of the students' social as well as intellectual development. The advisory system, if its influence be aggressively exerted, will come to be a valuable asset both to the faculty and undergraduates.

In that department of student life which President Woodrow Wilson calls the "side-shows," the past year has been one of distinct advancement. The Michigan Union has lent a degree of solidarity to student and alumni life even greater than would appear at first glance.

Commensurate in its own sphere with the influence of the Michigan Union is that of the Women's League. This organization has officers on the first floor of Barbour Gymnasium and furnishes Club House privileges in two parlors supplied with comfortable furniture and a reading room. During the past year, the League has given several dances and an ice carnival to reduce the indebtedness on the Women's Athletic Field, the property recently acquired near the observatory. It is the intention of the League to devote this field to tennis, basketball and other sports as soon as the field is free from debt and properly equipped.

The Student Council during the past year has vindicated itself in the estimation of its critics, particularly by the thoroughness with which it conducted the investigation in the Miller controversy. By its failure to cope with the Star Theatre situation a year ago last fall, the Council had been severely criticised and it is particularly fortunate that its members have this year so adequately demonstrated the efficiency of the Council in dealing with great campus problems.

In the field of inter-collegiate activity, Michigan's record during the past year has been extremely creditable. The baseball squad, under the tutelage of Coach McAllister, made an enviable record in the South, at home and among the Eastern institutions. After a successful southern trip, the team played several games in the Middle West and concluded the season abroad with an Eastern trip in which Cornell, Brown and Syracuse were defeated. These performances established for Michigan a rank among the best universities in the country.

The 'varsity track team was fifth in the Intercollegiate at Cambridge, securing fourteen points, thus finishing behind Harvard, Yale, Pennsylvania and Cornell and ahead of Princeton, Columbia, Syracuse and other prominent Eastern universities. In the intercollegiate relays, Michigan, the six-time champion, was defeated by Pennsylvania, thus breaking a long series of victories in this event.

The football season of nineteen hundred nine reminded one of the halcyon days of 1902-3-4. Around a small and uncertain nucleus of veteran players, Coach Yost was able to develop a team which exhibited true championship form in defeating Michigan's greatest gridiron rivals, Minnesota and Pennsylvania. The unfortunate Miller episode, which placed a quietus on Michigan's claims to the formal championship of the West, was characterized by unusually effective and adequate treatment by the University authorities. It is, on principle, unfortunate that the university senate has been divested of the general control of Michigan's athletic policy. Until there is a return to the former system of faculty control of athletics, such as now quite universally prevails in other large universities, there is scant hope that the athletic affairs of the university will be placed upon a basis whereby Michigan can resume relations with her hereditary rivals of the West.

The performances of Michigan's debaters and orators, past and present, must be a great source of gratification to all who are interested in this branch of inter-collegiate activity. In the Michigan-Chicago-Northwestern debates this year, Michigan won from Northwestern and was defeated by Chicago. Of the last twenty-two debates in the Central Debating League, Michigan has won sixteen and lost but six. In the Northern Oratorical League, with seven contesting universities, Michigan has won nine first honors during the last eighteen years. This establishes a record, and in a recently published book entitled, "Intercollegiate Debating", by Professor Pearson of Swarthmore College, Michigan is awarded first place in debating among American Universities.

The social, literary and musical organizations have furnished speakers, artists and functions in great diversity. Among the attractions presented by the Students' Lecture Association were Senator La Follette, Hon. Champ Clark, Lorado Taft, and the Donald Robertson Players: also an interesting vaudeville skit by the late Dr. Cook. The Choral Union numbers have included Mme. Schumann-Heinck, Yolanda Mero, Cecil Fanning, The Kneisel Quartet and Fritz Kreisler. For the May Festival are promised Sig. Campanari, Mme. Jomelli, Witherspoon and other prominent artists.

The student press during the past year has exercised a tremendous influence in fostering worthy student enterprises. THE MICHIGAN DAILY has been aggressive and eminently fair in treating questions affecting the student interest. THE MICHIGAN ALUMNUS which is the only tangible connection between the "old grads" and the University, is a powerful agency in keeping alive the interest of Alumni. The Alumnus is the largest college-graduate magazine in existence and its field is continually broadening. THE UNIVERSITY NEWS LETTER has been effective in disseminating news among the newspapers of the state, thus affording a much needed publicity concerning the aims and needs of the institution. THE MICHIGAN LAW REVIEW and MICHIGAN TECHNIC rank high among the professional journals of American Universities. THE GARGOYLE, while new, shows great possibilities in its field and deserves to become permanently established as a university publication. The recent action of the University Senate in recommending that credit be given in the literary department for services rendered on student publications, if made effective, will be an incentive for greater interest in college journalism and is bound to elevate the student publications to a still higher plane of influence and usefulness.

Digitized by Google

In a material way, the advancement of the University during the past year has been remarkable. The most significant financial accession of the year and one which, it is to be hoped, will inaugurate a new epoch in the history of the University was the testamentary bequest of the late Regent Hill, providing $200,000 for the construction of a new auditorium. Although the University derives an income from the three-eights' mill tax equivalent to the interest from an endowment of approximately $25,000,000, there is no reason why the graduates and friends of the University should fail to regard the University as a needful recipient for their surplus wealth. The need for more bequests such as that of Regent Hill, in view of the growing demands of the University, is patent to all who are conversant with university affairs. The extensive campus improvements which the annually increased enrollment necessitates, and the loss of valuable professors through our inability to compete with the financial inducements of other institutions, are continual reminders of the need for a more adequate financial foundation. It is to be hoped that the generous bequest of ex-Regent Hill will point the way to other Alumni, who, having profited from their training at Michigan, will remember the debt which they owe their Alma Mater.

Notwithstanding, however, the inadequate resources of the University, the building operations of the year have been extensive. The Memorial Building, universally pronounced as the most beautiful building on the campus, is now practically completed and will be occupied before the commencement of the next school year. This building, the funds for which were raised by popular subscription, will be the headquarters of the Alumni Association and will constitute a club-house for visiting Alumni. The Memorial Committee, also, have recently announced that a large lounging and reading room will be set apart for the use of the student body. The university art collection has been provided for and will be removed from the Library Building, thereby relieving its present congested condition. The cost of the Memorial Building, without equipment, has thus far been one hundred eighty-five thousand dollars.

The most costly building project of the past year has been the New Chemistry Laboratory, the expense of which, with equipment, will amount to three hundred thousand dollars. The new laboratory is to be devoted to all lines of chemistry and will also furnish accomodations for the School of Pharmacy. Extensive additions have also been made during the past year to the Engineering Building, the Observatory and the Old Chemical Building. The addition to the Engineering Building is to cost seventy-five thousand dollars, thus making its total cost approximately three hundred sixty thousand dollars and furnishing a building and equipment for the Engineering Department which is second to that of no institution in the country.

The material development of the University, however, is but indicative of that deeper institutional growth which has made it necessary. The University's true success is measured rather by the character of the educational influence which it affords as an institution and more especially by the achievements of its Alumni, who, as recipients of its bounty, are now rendering their service to society. In view of this latter consideration it is indisputable that if any one feature of the past year were to be pointed out as of the most far-reaching importance to the University, the movement tending to the organization of its Alumni should receive first consideration. Upon its success, together with the furtherance of the aims of the Michigan Union and the continued progressive influence of the University Senate, depends, in large measure, the advancement of the University in the future.

The Future

IT is at a pause between strides of progress that one may best sum up retrospectively, and from this summation glean a suggestion of the future. It is like a new sailing master, peering over a wake of broken sea, he hesitates whether he shall put in at the port toward which other craft are scurrying or spend his best efforts to achieve the port beyond. It is here in the sheltered comfort of a convenient harbor that he might content himself with the record of success of his former master. Or, he might reach beyond to the goal to which all aspire, but the accomplishment of which he alone may claim the distinction. So, too, we in the University may feel a tremble as the helm changes hands, then a re-engendering of confidence as the new skipper collects his best energies before breaking into the last forward sweep. Whether the command of our acting president is permanent or no, we are with him. There is evidence of the imperial spirit of Dr. Angell in the direction of university affairs, an evidence of stability and power as Dean Hutchins takes up the work which our loved President Emeritus has so efficiently done.

Throughout all our progress there has been an insistent and constant broadening of the University's fundamental purpose, the building of true character. A prosperous and honored alumni form tribute to the influence which we are privileged in appreciating. It is in this influence toward the truest that we may confidently rest the University's future. Michigan now has twenty-five thousand living alumni scattered over the world. Each and every one of them are actively working for a greater Michigan. This year eight hundred more will be added to the list. Every senior in the University is going out to tell of the wonderful happenings here in Ann Arbor. There are some people who criticise Michigan graduates for singing the praises of Michigan so loudly. That, to us, is the best indication that Michigan men are still thinking of their Alma Mater. No doubt the subject is not pleasing to one who has not had the privilege of passing through one of the many courses offered by the University. We who have been here; we who have lived here and who have breathed of the helpful influences, the praises of Michigan can not be too loudly voiced. We have been fostered by one of the greatest Universities of the world and the sweet memories that shall come back to us in after years are worthy of the poet's efforts. No graduate of Michigan will remain silent because the truth is unwelcome news to the ears of people who have not been favored with Michigan's training. Michigan has been great in the past, is great in the present, and the future holds for it a brilliant prospect. We can see the dawning of a greater era before us, and how good it will be when we are older to tell the younger generations of the old days in Michigan. How pleasant is the thought that now we are to go out into the world and point back with pride to the scene of our University days.

Michigan's material future cannot be questioned, notwithstanding the financial difficulties which often tend to check her present progress. The growth of the other phase of the ideal Greater University, that of teaching, has passed beyond realization. The spirit of Michigan is that tangible certainty which shall reach across the seas as it has already spread from Atlantic to Pacific. Analyze this spirit you cannot, unless you would call it the example of a peerless character which has given foundation to a universal ideal of upright conduct. It is the influence of this spirit which is to form our greater university. Not only a Greater University in a material sense, a great architectural plan, but a Greater University of ideas and ideals; a Greater University whose teachings shall lead us to greater efforts in doing honor to her who has taught us true manhood and true womanhood.

When we as seniors pass without this University, whose memory is so dear, we will not forget her teachings. We will ever be mindful of her training. We shall not forget the good she has done for us and will strive to repay in our humble way the assistance she has rendered us in starting us upon our various careers. We will each take up our duty and work along our path of industry. We shall not forget our Michigan and shall pause many times in our labor and live again the days we spent within her walls, and while we dream over those memories how pleasant shall be the thought that Michigan is not growing old and feeble, as we do day by day, but that Michigan is yet in her prime and is growing stronger and greater each year. Changes will be many, but those of us who have been here know they will be for the better.

To you, Michigan, we predict a future worthy of such a grand institution. The undergraduates and the graduates will ever be watching you in your progress and will rejoice in each step forward. It is with confidence that we shall tell of your glorious future. We know that you will build in a masterly way and fulfill our hopes.

President Emeritus

James B. Angell

PRESIDENT ANGELL tendered the resignation of his office to the Board of Regents in January, 1905. The Board persuaded him to withdraw his resignation, believing that in spite of his advanced years he was still able to render the University great service.

Last year, after passing his eightieth birthday, he renewed his request with so much insistence that it could not be denied. In granting it the Board of Regents expressed their strong desire that the President should retain some relation to the University, to which he had devoted so much of his life, and thereby should continue to give it the benefit of his wise counsels.

This relation was officially designated by the title of President Emeritus, a title implying not only the honor and dignity belonging to that office, but the added crown of approval in view of the long period of distinguished service now closed. By this action the governing Board paid a deserved tribute of praise to the beloved and venerable man who for so many years had so successfully administered the affairs of the University.

There is a certain pleasure, not wholly free from a tinge of sadness, in seeing the game you once played go on while you sit by as a spectator. Or, to change the figure to one more appropriate, the Emeritus is like a wise husbandman who sees the seed of his sowing coming to a happy fruitage. Or, to change the figure once more, the satisfaction that comes to a man who has spent his life in building up some noble structure and lives to see it completed, must be immeasurably great. To few men has it been given to reap these rewards and to enjoy this satisfaction so fully as to President Angell. In his hours of quiet meditation on the past there must come trooping before him a host of happy memories.

Not the least cherished among these, I am sure, are the happy faces of boys and girls, unnumbered but unforgotten, who once trod the paths of the old Campus and who remember with grateful emotion the man whom they affectionately called "Prexy," whose gracious words and noble virtues have perceptibly shaped their lives and moulded their character. Their kindest thoughts and best wishes attend him in his retirement, and they hope that he may still entertain many "a harmless day with a well-chosen book or friend." To us who meet him in his daily walks on the Campus and the streets he is a living witness to the beauty of a serene old age, and a shining example of those whose life can never fall into the sear and yellow leaf, where love, obedience and troops of friends one must not look to have.

Department of Literature, Science and Arts

JOHN OREN REED, Ph. D., Dean

Born, New Castle, Ind., Dec. 31, 1856.
Prepared at Spiceland Academy.
Entered U. of M. 1879.
Received degree of Bachelor of Phil., 1885.
Principal of New Castle, Ind., and East Saginaw High Schools.
In 1891 took up graduate study at Harvard.
Appointed Instructor in Physics at the University of Michigan.
Asst. Professor in 1894, and Junior Professor in 1899.
Full Professor in 1895.
Dean of Summer School 1904 to 1907.
Doctor of Philosophy at University of Jena in 1897.
Fellow of American Association for Advancement of Science and member of American Physical Society.

The department had its origin in the original act passed by the Legislature which created the University commonly known as the "Organic Act," passed in 1837. Owing to many complications the university was not opened until September, 1841, with two professors, a librarian and six students. The department was conducted along the conventional and traditional lines until 1852, which date marks the advent of Dr. Tappan and the passing of a new act by the legislature granting the university much greater power. Until the year 1855-56, no electives were allowed and the degree given was A.B., but with the beginning of this year the seniors were allowed to elect one-third of their work. At this time the department gave three courses, Classical, Scientific and Latin-Scientific, which led to the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. In 1877 the department was entirely revised, and an English course was added, giving the degree of Bachelor of Letters. The elective system had progressed so far by this time that fully one-half of the studies required for the doctor's degree were elective. In 1882-83, the university system was introduced, with the idea of producing specialization, and more truly university work, during the junior and senior years. A professorship of Science and the Art of Teaching was established in 1883, which has developed into our present teacher's course and Department of Education. There is also a graduate school established in connection with this department which is under the direction of the Administrative Council appointed by the faculty.

Department of Law

HARRY BURNS HUTCHINS, Ph. D., LL. D., Dean

Born, Lisbon, N. H., April 8, 1847.
Prepared New Hampshire Conference Seminary at Tilton.
Vermont Conference Seminary at Newberry.
Entered Wesleyan University at 19.
Studied at the University of Vermont and Dartmouth
Entered University of Michigan in the fall of '67.
Graduated with degree of Bachelor of Philosophy in 1871.
Instructor in History and Rhetoric in 1872 and Asst. Prof. in 1873.
Left to practice law and in 1884 returned to the University as "Jay" Professor of Law.
Went to Cornell in 1887 to organize law department.
In 1895 was recalled to Michigan as Dean of the department.
Acting President in 1897-1898 during Dr. Angell's absence.
Member of New York Bar Association, American Association, Michigan Political Science Association.
Received honorary degree of Doctor of Law from Wisconsin in 1897
Acting President of the University.

This department was provided for in the Organic Act in March, 1859. The Law School was opened on October 8, and included three professorships, which were later styled Marshall, Kent and Jay chairs. James V. Campbell, Charles Walker and Thomas M. Cooley were elected to fill these chairs, with Professor Campbell acting as dean. The first class was graduated in 1860. The original home of the school was the old chapel, and not till October, 1863, did it have a home of its own. The building was reconstructed and greatly enlarged in 1893. Again in 1898 it was practically demolished and rebuilt as it now stands. A fourth professorship was established in 1886, and named for the Honorable Richard Fletcher, of Boston. This chair was first filled by Ashley Palmer. The fifth chair was the Tappan professorship established in 1879, first filled by Alpheus Felch. In 1871 Professor Cooley became dean of the department. The original course consisted of two terms, each six months long, lasting from October through March. The instruction was entirely by lectures, and at the completion of the course the degree of LL.D. was given. In 1877 an entrance examination in English was required. In 1884 the terms were lengthened to nine months each, and in 1895 a third year was required for the completion of the course. The Practice Court as it now stands was established in the year 1892-1893.

Department of Engineering

MORTIMER ELWYN COOLEY, M.E., LL.D., Dean

Born, Canindaigua, N. Y., March 28, 1855.
Prepared at Canindaigua Academy.
Entered U. S. Naval Academy and graduated as Cadet Eng. in '78.
Connected with the Bureau of Steam Engineering.
In 1881 detailed to teach at University of Michigan.
Appointed Asst. Prof. of M. E. and resigned from Navy in 1885.
Passed Asst. Eng. of Michigan State Naval Brigade and served on "Yosemite" during the Spanish American War.
Fellow of American Association for Advancement of Science.
American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Michigan Engineering Society, U. S. Naval Institute, U. S. Society of Naval Engineers, Society for Promotion of Engineering Education, and National Association of Stationary Engineers.

The original act of 1837 made provision for this department, but no instruction was given in engineering until 1853-54, and no degree until 1860. This was largely due to the financial condition of the university at this time, although no separate department was established, engineering work was long conducted as a sub-division of the Literary Department and was developed and controlled by that faculty till 1895. At this time the regents gave it an individual status of its own, making it co-ordinate with the other departments. Chas. E. Green, Professor of Civil Engineering, was made dean. The requirements for entrance were practically those of the Literary Department, however, more credit was demanded for graduation. In the first year 331 students matriculated, and from then on the department has had a most remarkable growth. The home of the department was the old Civil Engineering building which had earlier been the home of the president. The present engineering building was completed in 1904, and in five years had become so inadequate that it has recently been enlarged about one-third of its former capacity. The department now includes courses leading to the degrees of M.E., E.E., Mar.E., Na.E. and Arch.E., each possessing its own head of the department. The naval tank in the university was for some time the only one possessed by any university in the country. The department has recently inaugurated a series of four, five and six year courses, with the corresponding degrees of B.S. in preference for Eng. or Arch., Bachelor of Engineering and Master of Engineering, and this scheme seems to promise a satisfactory solution for the many criticisms directed against a purely technical or engineering education

Department of Medicine and Surgery

VICTOR CLARENCE VAUGHN, Ph. D., M. D., LL. D., Dean

Born, Randolph County, Mo., Oct. 27, 1851.
Studied at Central College, Fayette, Mo.
Graduated from Mt. Pleasant College with B. S. in 1872.
In 1874 entered University of Michigan for graduate study.
Obtained Master of Science in 1875 and Ph. D. in '76.
Entered Department of Medicine and graduated in 1878.
In 1876 Asst. in Chemistry Laboratory.
Asst. Professor of Medicinal Chemistry in 1880.
Made full Professor in 1883 and Director of Hygienic Laboratory in 1887.
Dean of the Department since June, 1891.
Major Surgeon in Spanish War.
Member of the German Chemistry Society, French Society of Hygiene, Hungarian Society of Hygiene, and Association of American Physicians.

The Department of Medicine and Surgery was brought into existence by the organization of a faculty by the University on May 15, 1850. The Department formally opened the following October with Abram Sager as president. The course consisted of lectures which extended over a period of six months, from the first of October to the last of March. Clinical instruction was furnished from the beginning, and it was for the benefit of these clinics that various efforts were made to move the department to Detroit. However, in September, 1858, the regents formally decided against the Detroit project, thus insuring a more compact and unified department. In the year 1870-71, eighteen women were enrolled in the department. By this time the need of laboratory instruction was apparent, and as a result in 1872 the laboratory of Pharmacology was procured. This was followed by one for Physiology in 1884, Hygiene in 1888 and Clinical Medicine in 1891. Laboratory instruction has always been very thorough. In the same year, the new University Hospital was opened, accommodating about eighty patients. In 1880 the course was lengthened to three years and in 1890 to four years. About the year 1890 a six-year course leading to the degrees of A. B. and M. D. was offered, and the final step has lately been taken which requires the degree of A.B. before that of M.D. can be conferred. A valuable addition to the hospitals is that of the Psychopathic Ward which the Legislature some time ago provided for. In this way the medical student is furnished with an unusual opportunity for the study of insanity and nervous disorders. The new Medical building was completed in 1903 and is a remarkably well designed and complete structure.

DENTISTRY

Department of Dentistry

NELVILLE SOULE HOFF, D. D. S., Acting Dean

Born, Elizabeth, W. Va., July 20, 1854.
Prepared at Pomeroy High School.
Graduated at Ohio College of Dental Surgery in 1876.
In 1888 came to University of Michigan as Assistant Professor of Practical Dentistry.
Full Professor in 1891.
Secretary of Dental Faculty preceding Deanship.
Member of Ohio Dental Association, National Dental Society, American Society of Orthodontists, Michigan Dental Association.
Editor of Dental Record.

The first agitation for the creation of this department came in 1865 and in 1875 the Legislature appropriated $3000 per year, for a term of two years, with which to establish a school of dentistry at Ann Arbor, and in May of that year the regents took steps to provide for the department. Two professorships were created and first filled by Jonathan Taft and J. A. Watling. The department had its early existence under the general supervision of the Medical Department. The course consisted of two years' work, the terms being only six months long, March to October, but in the fall of '84, the terms were lengthened to nine months. In 1889 the course was finally made to consist of three years' of nine months each, and the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery was given. The first accommodations were in the Homœopathic Building, and in 1891 at the completion of the new University Hospital they occupied the old hospital building. At this same time the Dental Society of the University of Michigan was organized, and assumed charge of the publishing of the Dental Journal. The new Dental Building recently finished is undoubtedly the best equipped and most complete Dental Building in the world, especially in Technics, Laboratories and Dental Operating Rooms. The Taft library is sheltered here and contains almost every work in Dentistry and practically complete files of every Dental Journal published. The Dental museum is also included within the building and the odontological collection is especially strong—probably the largest and the best of its kind to be found in any Dental College. It contains the collections of the late Professor Ford and of Drs. Williams and Louis Mitchell of London, England. The museum has been named the Ford-Mitchell museum.

Department of Pharmacy

JULIUS OTTO SCHLOTTERBECK, Ph. C., Ph. D., Dean

Born, Ann Arbor, Sept. 1, 1865.
Prepared Ann Arbor High School.
Graduate from School of Pharmacy, U. of M., 1887.
Asst. in Pharmacy, 1888.
In 1891 given the degree of B. S. in Chemistry.
Instructor in Pharmacognosy and Botany, '92-'95.
Received the degree of Ph. D., '95-'96 from University of Berne.
Returned to University as Asst. Professor of Pharmacognosy.
In 1904 was advanced to Junior Professor.
In 1905 was made Dean.
Member of American and Michigan Pharmaceutical Associations, American Association for Advanced Science and American Conference of Pharmaceutical Faculties.

The school was organized and made independent of any other department in the year 1876–7. Before that time a course in Pharmacy had been given in the Chemistry Building under the general supervision of the chemical faculty. The requirements demanded for admission were in general a full and complete High School education. At the present time they vary depending whether the student is a candidate for the degree of Pharmaceutical Chemist which is a two-year course or whether he is candidate for the B. S. of Pharmacy in which case the requisites are practically those for the B. S. degree in any other department. In 1880 the laboratory of general chemistry was completed and this was used as the home of the department up to the present year. With the completion of the new laboratory the school has moved into new and commodious quarters with splendid facilities for special work. Practical work is obtained from the botanical gardens where the principal plants for medicinal use are grown and studied. Frederick Sterns and Co., Detroit, offer a fellowship of $350 a year, which has been maintained since 1895. Appointment is made by the Board of Regents upon recommendation of the Faculty.

Department of Homeopathy

WILBERT B. HINSDALE, M.S., A.M., M.D., Dean

Born Wadsworth, Ohio, May 25, 1881.
Graduated with B. S. from Hiram College in 1875.
Studied medicine at Cleveland.
Doctor of Medicine at Homeopathic Hospital College of Cleveland in 1889.
In 1890 was raised to full professorship.
In 1895 called to University of Michigan as Dean of the Department and Director of the Homeopathic Hospital.
Member of American Association for Advancement of Science. American Anthropological Society, Historical and Archaelogical Society of Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin, Ornithological Societies and Michigan Academy of Science.
Trustee of Hiram College.
Conferred degree of Master of Arts in 1900.

The first petition for this department came to the Legislature in 1851, and in 1855 they required that the University should support a professorship of Homeopathy. In April 1875 the Legislature made an appropriation of $6,000 a year for the organization and maintenance of a school of Homeopathy at the University. This the regents organized the following fall, starting it with two professors, and provided that it should conform to the rules of the University proper. The attendance fluctuated greatly, starting in 1876 with 24. From that time till 1895 there was more or less dissatisfaction expressed concerning the school. In the summer of 1895 it was completely reorganized, with a new faculty, since which time it has enjoyed a prosperous existence. It now has very commodious quarters and the new Homeopathic Hospital in the immediate vicinity of the campus is especially well equipped and one of the finest structures connected with the University. A special feature of this department is the Pathogenetic Laboratory which is especially well adapted for experimental work. In connection with the Hospital there are two nurses' homes under the charge of an experienced Principal. The term of study extends through three years at the end of which time a certificate of graduation is given.

History of the 1910 Literary Class

WHEN "Bob" Clancy drew the swaddling clothes from the infant 1910 he turned to "Ben" Harris, who stood near by, and remarked, "It's a precocious looking brat." Barring the unpleasant appellation, "that's us," in the phrase of the hoi polloi. The class of 1910 certainly was precocious in its infancy. It let out one unholy squawk and jumped into self-conscious maturity. But then, look at the God-parents it had. A class that Clancy and Harris couldn't foster to greatness wouldn't be worth much; and as everybody knows the class of 1910 was a gold-mine of talent and energy at the outset.

The class of 1909 didn't have much to brag over in its victory on "Black Friday" of 1909. All we remember is that we huddled about a flag-pole feeling for pant-buttons on each others' coats (the sign of humility). We had beaten the sophs to it when it came to putting up the posters, but on the fateful night of the rush all we knew was that a "flying wedge" hit us. After that we studied decomposition of vegetable matter, and the ooziness of oozy ooze. We have since discovered that our class was the goat that taught the revered Student Council the faults of its invention. Next we had our election. Ray Thorne came out on top as class president, and "Vic" Jose was retired by a comfortable majority to the bosom of the electorate.

We succeeded in obliterating the much vaunted soph track team in the fresh-soph meet; we put a crimp in sophomoric attempts to upset the freshman banquet by skillfully resorting to the heating tunnels and the shipping facilities of the American Express Co., by means of which the toastmaster, "Cap" Ranney, was ushered into the presence of the apple of his eye; and we wound up the year of rivalry by winning a moral if not a statistical victory over the naughty-nines. It happened thus wise: we won the push ball contest, hands down (as a matter of fact they were up), and the sophs never had a look-in as far as the relay races were concerned; but we lost the tug of war and the rock contest, the latter so farcical an affair that it was abolished after our experience with it. But the Council gave the sophs two points for winning it, and we went down in history as losing by a score of 3 to 2.

Socially we weren't stagnating. We had the temerity to give a class function at Granger's, and made it pay, the chairman reporting a surplus of one simoleon at the close of the affair.

Our sophomore year was inaugurated with a coup d'etat that would have done credit to Tammany. Mr. Harrison Jones, otherwise and thereafter known as "Prexy," entered the lists against "Chick" Bryson, and tilted for the presidency of the class. Bryson's ticket would have had a walkaway but for the heroic efforts of Sophie Strohmeier. "Chick" had counted enough chickens to start a poultry farm, and then she stalked into the polls at the head of ten thousand women voters (the figures are given on Bryson's authority). The result was that Jones was declared pre-eminently presidential.

We lost the rush through the courtesy of the above mentioned controlling body of upperclassmen, they having decreed that we should again defend the pole. We didn't. We just stood around it and suffered the freshmen to approach us. Then, Ye Gods, how we did taste gore.

About the middle of the year "Prexy" Jones became afflicted with an ulcerated conscience, and as a result we passed the first of the series of memorable reformatory measures, now forgotten. We amended the class constitution, making it a high crime and misdemeanor to organize and advertise a "ticket" for elections. We had the pleasure of seeing other classes step into the same ethereal trap.

The fresh-soph meet we lost by a narrow margin, the freshmen scoring four points more than we in the most notable contest of its kind the university has ever seen. The worst of it was that we had to suffer defeat with "Pinky" Patterson on the side lines, though he was doing around 6 feet 2 inches in practice in the high jump.

Then came the freshman banquet. The memory of the way we put it over the honorable class of 1909 up at Barbour Gym caused the transfer of the event to the city Armory which was highly pleasing to the belligerent element of our class. Though the toastmaster evaded us by camping for some few days on the roof of the armory, we managed to break all records for the capture of "toasts."

1910 began, now, to make itself conspicuous in general university affairs. "Bohny" Bohnsack became a member of the two-mile relay team that took down the plum at Pennsy; Lee White was advanced to the athletic editorship of the Daily.

For the first time in the history of the function the sophomore girls, led by Hope Conklin, actually made money on the "Freshman Spread," the proceeds being appropriated for the purchase of a portrait of Dr. Angell presented to the gym.

Thus closed the prattling period.

The class was so busy individually in its junior year that it hadn't much opportunity to express any esprit de corps. The only time it showed any concerted will was at the election, when Bohnsack showed his heels to Dale Souter.

In athletics we managed to win the departmental basketball championship under the leadership of "Maxine" Elliott, but lost out in the semi-finals. On the varsity teams we were represented by Bohnsack on the 4-mile relay team, Hill and Enzenroth in baseball and Shafroth on the tennis team. "Cocky" Cochrane was a member of the board of directors of the Athletic Association.

White boosted the Gargoyle into existence this same year. Bryson won a more than transitory fame by plucking the Field Poetry Prize later in the year. Harold Rotzel made the varsity debating team, and "Ed" Bowen starred in "Culture." White represented the class as News Editor of the Daily, being succeeded by "Fritz" Gooding.

The social event of the year, the J-Hop, gave the class fussers a chance to shine brightly, for, like all J-Hops, ours was the best ever given.

The Junior play, "Eds & Co.," was a tremendous success, written by Marion Luddington. The girls inaugurated two very worthy institutions, the class luncheons for the gentle sex, and the Junior-Freshman Groups, through which the older girls exercise parental influence over verdant and naive femininity.

When "Jim" Lawshe began to howl for "copy" the class of 1910 had scarcely reached the stage of senioric dignity and aloofness; and for that reason some of the conspicuous events of the year may be omitted.

The memory of the election is still fresh. "Swede" Good didn't decide to run for class president till the eleventh hour, but as it happened that was soon enough. He was elected from a field of three candidates, Greer winding up five votes behind him, with "Morrie" Shafroth four votes further in the rear.

The inauguration of class luncheons, since become a popular campus institution, was the work of the social committee augmented by the energy of Fannie Biggs. To her, also, is due the projected development of the swing-out from a tedious formality to a gala day event.

Individually the class has been very active. Carl Adam has been managing the exchequer of the Daily; Hollis Baker has been Musical and Dramatic Editor of the same publication, with Lee White at the News Editor's desk, and Wilbur Elliott in charge of the athletics department of the paper as well as of the Alumnus. Dana Jones has been the manager of the News-Letter. "Chick" Bryson, collaborating with Roy Welch, produced the new field song that won another hundred-dollar prize.

"Ben" Boynton managed the destiny of the track team that caused eastern colors to droop. Enzenroth captained the baseball team for the season. Souter boosted his share by managing the varsity band.

"Bobby" Moreland was one of the co-authors of "Koanzaland," and Frank Kapp was the general chairman chosen to recoup the finances of the Union. "Al" Weeks and "Ed" Bowen starred in the production.

Three events marked the period during which this screed was being evolved; Mortarboard offered a prize for the best class song and was having a hard time to get anybody to try for it; the class voted with much parleying to give its memorial to the prospective Union clubhouse and Palmer Field building.

Thus closes, so far as the writer can say without butting into the sacred confines of futurity, the history of the class of 1910; a class that willingly gave itself to experimentation for the benefit of posterity; a class that while perhaps not always notable for its movement as a complete organization has at least been influential through its members, and through the admirable spirit and energy of its girls.

Shining Lights of the Senior Lits

DURING the last five or six years, while the wave of political reform has been sweeping over the country, we have heard many idealistic statements to the effect that the man should not seek the office but the office should seek the man. Surely the observance of such a rule is a consummation devoutly to be wished in class elections, but the commission entrusted with the compiling of these statistics finds that our class has failed to pay any heed to the rule. Much as we hate to confess it, the election of class celebrities was attended with the grossest fraud, and a variety of corruption that would make a Tammany ward heeler yell for help. The results of the balloting, then, are not to be relied on; and we record them only because we have no discretion in the matter.

For most popular man in the class, of course our President, "Swede" Good, was chosen by a safe majority. Shafroth, Culley, Bohnsack and Hill were in the running, but the numerous votes among the girls corruptly controlled by "Swede's" henchmen made his election certain, another glaring instance of the pernicious effects of the foreign element in American politics.

Among the girls, the race for the most popular was won by Fannie Biggs with Florence LeValley and "Em" Ely tied for second place. The judges, however, decided to throw out some of the votes cast for Miss Biggs on the ground that she "indulged in diverse and sundry evil practices to secure votes—to wit, making and distributing fudge and other candies—promoting luncheons and serving ham sandwiches at class meetings, in application of the doctrine 'the best way to a man's heart is thru his stomach,'—to the great corruption of the electorate." Consequently the three Misses aforesaid were put on an equal footing.

When the votes for the most persistent fusser were counted, the returns showed that the gay Lothario of the class is Dale Souter. Hollis Baker showed considerable strength; but it is to be noted in Hollis' case that his fussing has been "Consistent" rather than "Persistent". He has fussed one girl and has fussed her "consistently" and loyally; whereas, Dale deserves the honor of the election because he has not been so selfish in bestowing his affections. He has fussed persistently and has transferred his affections often, always making it a point to fuss at least a dozen different girls a week.

The choice for jolliest girl lay between Jeanette Hawkes and Josephine Rankin. And it must be admitted that poor old decrepit Melancholy has had to take ignominiously to the woods whenever either of these two appeared on the scene. "Irv" Stein voted for Mrs. Wenly on this ballot,—no wonder he got his credit in Philosophy 1.

In answer to the query "Who is the handsomest man", one young lady had the unblushing impuence to say "I have not seen any handsome ones at all". Now isn't that absurd? I guess she has not met our Ken Arthur and our Fritz Gooding—two as handsome men as ever strutted the aisles of aChicago department store. And the ballot showed that that the honor is divided between Ken and Fritz as the Class Adonis. (Editor's note: Why did everybody overlook Charlie Franklin?)

(The statistics commission begs to be excused from reporting the result of the vote for prettiest girl.—Various considerations make it exceedingly embarrassing to discuss the topic.)

The contest for best student was hotly fought—Bryson and Shafroth showing most strength among the men, while Edith Taylor and Josephine Rankin crossed swords on the other side of the house. Shafroth and Miss Rankin took a mean advantage of their rivals, however, by developing a strong team work for certain poly-ec courses. Gossiping rumor has it that Miss Rankin has pulled "Morry" thru eight hours of work at least.

But the most exciting of all the events was the contest for the "other extreme". There were many entries but only a few stuck till the last lap, and when they swung into the stretch only Ken Arthur, Doug. Campbell, Fritz Gooding and Ralph Culley had a chance. That fatal trio "wine, women and song" stood close by the track urging them on and the four leaders passed the judge's stand neck and neck.

To the honor of the most "saintly" Harold Rotzel was chosen almost unanimously.—May we add that we deprecate that kind of cheap wit displayed by the fellow who voted for Paul Greer in this connection. Greer saintly?—Call black white; call "Dutch" Henes a live one; call Satan holy; but don't in mercy's name call Greer saintly.

The position of leader of the anvil chorus with the official title "worst knocker" was awarded to our pessimistic, perpetually-grouchy "J" Gould. And one voter said she would give a prize to any one who could beguile a smile from the lips of the above mentioned gentleman. "Al" Weeks, Walter Towers and Lee White were elected to prominent places in the chorus; while Edith Taylor was chosen the woman soloist.

Our jovial "Bobbie" Granville won the class freshman distinction. But "Sig" David and "Ben" Boynton were close rivals. The laurel wreath was handed to "Bony" Bohnsack as the best athlete, while "Norm" Hill and Culley showed merit for honorable mention. "Al" Weeks landed in the berth for class humorist with no dangerous competitors. But really "Al" in his most humorous mood could show no more salty wit than was displayed by the young lady who voted for Donavan for this position. Presumably she did not know the candidate for whom she voted, but relied on the Irish name as an indication of wit. But had she known that his first name is Percy, the mistake would have been avoided, for no man named Percy ever cracked a joke—to our knowledge.

In the choice of celebrities up to this point there has been at least a nominal dispute, but in the vote for the "shrewdest politician", there was only one man considered. Need we name him? "Swede" Good.—A greased eel isn't in it with "Swede" when it comes to being slippery; and Good has shown his ability to slide into any position he has wanted, and no one has been able to hold him.

Carl Adam picked the plum labeled "the worst bluffer" and there is no doubt about his deserving the prize. The most convincing proof that he is a successful bluffer is the fact that he bluffed himself into believing that he is not a bluffer.

The result of the vote on "who is most likely to be famous" proved rather unsatisfactory because, with a few exceptions, every one voted for himself. The "exceptions" however voted for "Johnnie" Denison and "Ruddie" Jose, so we grant to them the hopes.

The class showed itself shamefully unkind when it came to the question "who will be the first man to get married", for the votes were cast for Franklin and Boynton. The sarcasm shown in this ballot cannot fail to cause the two fellows much suffering, for neither of them ever stood a chance to win a girl. The men in the class refused to vote on the proposition "the first girl to get married"; but the girls rallied around "Em" Ely and named her on the first ballot. And, strange to say, nearly all of them answered the latter question "if not yourself, who would you rather be" by saying "Em" Ely.

VanTyne and Paxon were chosen the most popular professors But Wenley and Smalley had many adherents, too. And the verdict of the class was that most good was received from the American History courses.

There was considerable variety in the answers of the men to the question "if not youself, who would you rather be", but the result showed Satan, the Lord and Dean Reed as the most prominent.

Most of the class avoided the question in regard to "cons" that should have been received by saying that this is no time to disagree with the faculty. Where ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise, it was remarked, so if the faculty think we ought to graduate, let them continue in blissful ignorance of the true condition of our "alleged" knowledge.

History of the Senior Law Class

WHEN a body of men from all over the land with widely different ideas and ideals are gathered together with a common purpose, work together with that purpose in view, and after years of effort, during which many falter and drop out, achieve the desired end, it is fitting that some record, however faulty it may be, of the various steps taken during their progress, should be constructed and kept in permanent form.

In the fall of 1907 some three hundred prospective members of the bar came to Ann Arbor from nearly as many communities, eager to begin the training for that which nearly every one felt to be his life's work. From cities and towns far and near they came, and that famed producer of great legal minds and statesmen, the American farm, was not conspicuous by the absence of its offering. The usual indignities inflicted upon incoming students by the older men for the first few weeks was borne with a fortitude characteristic of students of a dignified department.

Of the happenings of the first year aside from the daily routine of seemingly endless cases evolved apparently with the express purpose in view of bewildering the minds of future law students, little is worthy of note. As is usual with classes in law schools embryo politicians were plentiful and many a deep, dark plot was hatched during the first few weeks with reference to the coming class election. Aspirants for the presidency and the various minor offices numbered in ratio to the sum total of the offices themselves about ten to one. Interest ran high and after a little heart-to-heart talk with the Dean the whole of an afternoon was consumed in making the nominations. Impassioned oratory was rampant and the merits of the public spirited candidates were declaimed in thrilling tones and flawless rhetoric.

A week later the election was held and Frank B. Keefe, of Oshkosh, Wis., he of the statuesque pose, emerged triumphant as president of the class. The vice-presidency went to Joe Primeau, the corpulent, and it must have been at this time that he learned, in part at least, the secret of political success which stood him in such good stead in the memorable presidential campaign two years later.

The first year's administration was a decided success in every way. Class meetings were held and a few social affairs given. Acquaintanceship ripened into friendship and many lifelong ties were formed among the members of the class which have strengthened throughout the course. Just before the close of the college year death entered our ranks for the first time. Fred French, an excellent student and a good comrade, was taken from us.

Most of those who survived the two encounters with the faculty of the first year returned in the fall of 1908 as Juniors. Of the original three hundred many were missing, but this loss was made up in part by a number of new men who came to us from other institutions. In politics the famous Jones family sprang into the limelight. To the presidency was elected a man from beyond the Rockies, John D. Jones, of Montana. The south claimed its own in the person of Harrison Jones, of Georgia (pronounced Joja), who succeeded Primeau as second in command. By this time the law had become a little more tangible and attainable than the year before and we were ushered into the mysteries of pleading and other unknown branches with somewhat less of fear and trembling than had hitherto characterized our attitude. The year, for the most part, passed smoothly and except for the inevitable pro-semester periods of unrest, agreeably. New friendships were formed and class ties became firmer. Toward the close of the year a banquet was given. Mark Weatherford, also from the grizzly bear country, acted as toastmaster and short speeches were made by a number of students and faculty members. The attendance was large and the banquet did much toward the promotion of good fellowship.

During the second semester death again entered our ranks. Two of our classmates departed this life. They were Ernest Lovett Tyler and John Joseph Overly, both of them the best of students and lovable companions.

Nearly all returned at the beginning of the senior year for the final lap of the race. A few had remained in Ann Arbor during the summer because of their great love for certain branches which the faculty, ever kindly disposed, allowed them to take over in summer school. Life in general and more especially the law had by this time assumed a more serious aspect. The end of college days was in sight and the time rapidly approaching when we must apply the knowledge gained and enter the real struggle for existence at the bar. We engaged in the work laid out for us with renewed zeal. The practice court afforded us opportunity to apply some of the principles mastered in previous years and to fix more firmly in our minds the art of court procedure. Politics again demanded attention. For the presidency three men of known achievement and excellence were nominated; Primeau of Michigan, Cheek of Kentucky and MacRobert of Massachusetts. The first ballot resulted in a tie, so evenly was opinion divided. A second election was held at which nearly every man in the class turned out and voted. The result showed each candidate as having gained but the Michigan man had a few more than either of the others and Joseph H. Primeau was declared elected.

The law class of 1910 may well take pride in its achievements individually and collectively and in its personnel. In athletics a fair amount of success has been ours. Twice the class football team has reached the finals in the campus championship games. In the fall of 1909 the team played the Lits. in the finals and the result was a tie. When the game was played over, however, the team had struck an off day and for the second time we lost the championship in football after getting within striking distance. The same is true of basketball. We have twice reached the finals and then lost the championship game. Three men have won their "M" during the law course; Tom Riley in football, Fred Dean in baseball and Frank Ayres in tennis. Tom Clancy managed the 'varsity football team in 1908. In track we have been ably represented by Keck, McCarthy and others while Immel has starred in almost every branch of sport. On the platform we have been well represented. Simmonds and Keefe have both made 'varsity debating teams and we have many other men who excel in the line of oratory, including M. M. Thomas and "that southern Demosthenes, Logan M. Cheek." The campus musical organizations have drawn heavily upon our number. Keefe and E. G. Kirby have both managed the musical clubs while Harold Eastman was director of the mandolin club in his senior year. Kothe, McRobert, Wilkins, Keefe and Westerman have all been on the university glee club. The class has also contributed to the staffs of the various student publications at different times. Primeau, Cheek and MacRobert have represented us in the student council and I. L. Evans on the board of directors of the Michigan Union.

In the foregoing, an attempt has been made to portray, as accurately as possible, that part of our life as a class here at Michigan appearing on the surface. Our mistakes have been many and we still have a few things to learn. A large and important part of our class history is yet to come and not until the end of college days is upon us next June will the full significance of the years spent together at Michigan be felt.

Cases Cited in the Senior Law Class

VARIETY is the spice of life, so the Senior Law Class of 1910 may be said to be a lively one. It can lay claim to politicians of note, fussers, knockers, humorists and it has even been suggested that there were two students in the class.

The strenuous contests for class officers—those honored positions of distinction—through the past three years have demonstrated that its members will not be content to take back seats through life. Keefe who seemed to have had the class by the nose in the first election of our freshman year, thought he would again enter the field of politics and run for the most popular man. He got one vote. Martin Luther Fetta came out from behind his modesty and consented to run and was elected by a large majority. The most popular girl is the last one to pass the building. Captain I. L. Evans, he of the good ship "Sally" claimed the honor of being the most persistent fusser. No one denied it. The choice of jolliest girl rested evenly between Snyder and Starr. In answer to the question "who is the handsomest man in the class" there were many replies. An attempt was made to elect "Red" Eastman, Walter Spaulding, Ozawa and Hulser. When they heard that Tom Clancy was out for the position they knew that with his mighty forces there could be no defeat for Tom. Tom was finally elected although some said he should not have had the honor because he wore glasses which spoiled his appearance. Some wanted to hand the honor to Moon. He received enough votes to warrant us in giving him honorable mention.

The surprise of the day was the election of Nellie Banyon to the exalted position of most handsome girl.

Samuel Henry Rhoads was voted the best student in the class. When Sam does not twist his head around so much that he chokes his wind, he can certainly lay down the law. Shurtz and Swentzel thought they had a chance for this honor but they finished awfully late.

It is with pride that the writer is allowed the privilege of making it a matter of record that the Honorable "Chick" Hayt is the poorest student in the class. The class gave him the honor unanimously. Rube Covey nominated him so as to keep the honor away from his own door.

There seems to be a diversity of opinion as to what honor is coming to Wamsley. Some say he is the class freshman, others that he is the most likely to become famous, while still others classify him as the most saintly in our midst. Take your choice.

The best athlete in the class is acknowledged to be Keck. There are several though who deserve mention. Primeau, Riley, Dean, Immel, McCarthy, Watson, Talmadge, and Wright all have served their class well. Someone became confused and voted for Earl Delano. Humor seems to flow through the class like water down the river Nile during the rainy season. Everybody seemed bent upon putting a little humor in his senior blank. If it is desired to know who is the joke of the class we can say that Harrison Jones is it.

The shrewdest politician must go to Fetta for the way he managed to swing votes for the most popular man in his direction is worthy of mention.

They say that Herman Kothe is the most successful bluffer in the class. That does not mean that he is the only one who resorts to this practice. Most of us have tried it but have not been able to get away with it so frequently. You can't really tell whether Cap. Evans is bluffing or giving you sea-tales. He has a brilliant mind but he takes up so much time relating cases that have arisen in his personal experience that we don't get a chance to learn as much as we ought. Captain took up one hour trying to prove that the North Pole was set at an angle. Whether he secured his information from Cook or Peary we can not say.

There was a long list of entries on the question as to who would be the first man married and it is pretty generally conceded that "Shorty" Carver has the best chance. Biesterfeld, Foley, Isenberg and Straub are all strong with the ladies so we can not give accurate statistics on this point.

Joe Primeau says his aspiration after graduating is to become the Ann Arbor police force. Joe said he never made such a hit, before or since, as he did as a policeman at the Michigan Union Circus. The ladies all thought him "just too cute" in his uniform and Joe does like to please the ladies.

After frivolous questions were answered the voters began to show discretion in casting their ballots. As for the most popular professor the writer refuses to state the winner of the largest number of votes as he has courses to several professors in the department and wishes to pass them all. It might not be amiss to say that no one professor seems to have the support of the whole class as the votes were very evenly divided.

Cheek said that if not himself he would rather be George Washington. (For Cheek's edification the editor will say that George is dead, hope he does not mean that.) The most successful excuse depends upon the professor. Each has his favorite. If it is to be given to Professor Rood it is sufficient to say that you were reading some old Hebrew cases in the Library on the subject and could not get over the lesson.

The class seemed hurt when asked the question as to how many conditions it should have received. The question was stated in this manner to avoid the necessity of counting the actual number received.

The class would make a great hit in Barnum and Bailey's Circus. We are positively the only class on the campus that has twenty-three members with green hair, six with olive brown, two with Alice blue, eighty-seven with golden and one with purple. Banyon and Albert don't count.

For the benefit of any who doubt that the members of the class look like students we refer you to the Senior Medics. One day in Dr. Vaughn's lecture on Medical Jurisprudence a member of the Medic class was heard to remark, "Look at those fellows over there. They are to be Lawyers next June. I would want more than that to defend me if I ever got into trouble." At the same time several members of our class were commenting upon the looks of the Senior Medics on the other side of the room and they seemed in doubt as to whether they would want any of them to doctor them. It all depends upon your point of view.

History of 1910 Engineering Class

IN September, 1906, there was launched a vessel since known as the good ship "Tenner." On this particular date she was a hopeless looking pickle-boat, destitute of rigging, outfit and crew. She had been built for the cruise through the seas of Engineering preparation, the latest addition to the yearly changing of the fleet of four. In answer to the call for a crew, some 350 of the greenest looking land-lubbers that ever sought the briny, shipped for the voyage. Having been duly enrolled by the gruff and friendly old sea-dog "J. B.," who represented the owners, we one and all, busied ourselves in finding our bunks and getting our dunnage stowed. We soon saw that to accomplish any thing we must needs organize. This we did, electing for our first skipper "Ted" Weager, and choosing as mates "Jim" Cress, "Art" Wickes and "Al" Towar. How well we remember our skipper's businesslike tones saying, "Motion carried—any remarks?" With this organization the fitting out was soon accomplished and a start made on our first year's cruise in company with the other three boats of the fleet.

Our first excitement came shortly after, when one fine evening we were boarded during the second half of the dog-watch by a howling band of rough-necks from one of our companion ships, the "Niner." They stole our colors from the mast-head, drove us up the spars, and up the rigging and then departed with ill-suppressed satisfaction. We learned later this was a way of initiating the new crew each year. However we retaliated later by outsailing the entire fleet in the regatta for the "Football Cup." We also came within an ace of winning the "Basketball Cup" in a following regatta and undoubtedly would have won had not "Tim" Flannigan got in front of the mainsail in the last race, and kept the wind from it.

During the month of February we encountered our first real weather, the equinoctials or finals, in which storm we lost a few overboard.

Nothing more of a serious nature happened from there on, and we dropped anchor in the harbor of First Year Island on June 12th, going out of commission until the following September.

Most of the old crew reshipped in the fall of '07. Many, however, found the sea was too much of a strain upon the optic nerves and failed to sign up on this account. The election of officers this year brought out "Lin" Linthicum as skipper, with "Stoep" Stoepel, Trot Gallup and "Gene" Leger as mates. "Lin" always has an eye for lines and can tell you when a thing is properly stayed or not.

At precisely the same time as the year before, according to the log-book, we were run down by an ignorant bunch of plow-drivers aboard the "Elevener" on her initial trip. Infuriated at their impudence, we boarded them, and while unable to secure our ensign which one of their crew succeeded in getting, we took them ashore in small boats and sent them up trees where they could better study the heavenly bodies as an aid to navigation.

As the previous year we demonstrated our ability to carry sail and again we won all the races for the "Football Cup."

We had severe weather during the equinox in February, 1908, and some trouble in weathering "Mathematics Reef." From then on fates were kind, and though we met with several severe spring squalls, we finally let go our mud-hook at Second Year Island, where we laid up the hooker 'till fall.

September '08 saw our crew reshipped for the hardest part of the voyage. Practically the same bunch of the deck-swabbers as left in June. Some, however, having been found lacking in seamanship, were allowed to ship only on agreement to do extra duty before being classed as "able-bodied."

Skipper "Jim" Cress (who has since left the sea for West Point and the army), Don Tylee, Harry Bellamy and "Bill" Hurley were elected to office. As in the other fall regattas we showed our name on our stern to all competitors for the "Football Cup," winning hands down.

Very severe weather was encountered in "S and R Straits," and the mid-year storms temporarily put many of our crew out of commission. Some recuperated sufficiently during the Easter calm to weather the con squalls in good shape, but many remained on the sick list when the anchor dropped in Third Year Island harbor in June. They remained for a summer rest cure under the care of the ship's surgeon "Joe" Parker, with whose help and the exhilarating effects of an occasional journey to the Orient, they got into shape again.

October, '09, saw "Dug" Jamieson at the helm, with George Rollin, H. M. Pierce and George Anderson as mates. Trouble developed soon after the start. The vessel took on a decided list to port. Upon investigation it was found that the big trimming tank in the starboard bow had sprung a leak. "Balty" Browne saved the day by volunteering to take its place until repaired. "Stretch" Fletcher said there was no danger, anyway, as he had saved up enough corks to float the ship. We lost the "Football Cup" races this year, due to the lack of wind. The roll from "S and R Straits" could be still felt as we neared the turbulent waters of "Hydraulic Sound." These two bodies of water, presided over by the god of stormy passages, Gardener S. "Neptune," gave us the hardest sailing of the whole four year voyage. Indeed, at the end of the third year, there was nary a man jack of us who did not realize that sailing through the seas of Engineering preparation meant work, real work, requiring powers of endurance and perseverance. 'Tis not all top s'e weather there. We have many aboard who have not recovered from the hydraulic water spout which struck us in February last.

As we near our final anchorage we feel quite chesty as we look back over the log of the cruise and see the record of the ship. It is with feelings of pride that we point to such names as Magidsohn, Ranney, Allerdice, Linthicum, May, Leger, who have been the most active jack tars on the cruise. Besides we have many skillful navigators whom we look forward to as successful commanders of future ships. And when the anchor drops for the last time this coming June, and "Tenner" goes out of commission to take her place with other abandoned crafts of years gone by, we'll know that though no longer an entity the good ship will ever exist in the hearts of her crew till each one has sailed his final voyage over life's sea.

Exhaust from the Steam Lab

TURN her off, fellows. We have had noise enough. Talk of anvil choruses and rag-time—after reading and counting the votes of the Senior Engineers we are ready for the forest primeval. There seemed to be genuine brotherly love present everywhere—the old fashioned kind where one brother is always ready to tell father on the other. Some things were told which out of respect for the reading public we refrain from publishing. The choicest morsels we herewith inscribe for the edification of the sons and daughters of the members of the class in future years.

Our illustrious president, after stuffing the ballot box and brow-beating many of his weaker classmates into the knowledge of his many good characteristics managed to win out by a chin as the most popular man of our dearly beloved class. As he was also well supported for the honor of best and shrewdest politician it can easily be seen how he chinned his way to the front. "Dave" and "Bill" Hurley showed true running form at the start but were overcome by "Doug's" smoke. By voting for himself "Jean" managed to get his name in the ballot box. We know your writing, "Jean."

Although Pearl won the honor of being the most popular girl, Georgie Anderson and Halleck made a determined fight for the place. You're there strong, George.

It is hardly necessary to announce the winner for the honor of being the best fusser, for it seems that Ralph Hidey and Pearl have recently been missed from our number. They say "Trot" Gallup is a fusser but he never introduces us to his friends. We saw "Balty" Browne cavorting on Granger's floor the other night. Sly boy!

The writer hates to do it and sincerely regrets it but it is necessary to announce that "Don" Molony and Liskow ran a tie heat and were far ahead of all others in the beauty race. That does not mean that there are no good looking ones in the class.

Revelations! Tim Flanigan is our prettiest girl. Won't Fredonia go wild when Tim returns home?

The only places where the midnight oil has been seen burning this year was in the rooms of "Socks" Snow and "Trot" Gallup. "Socks" says he never studies but we know better. Jones has been tutoring under Gardner S,, but cannot compete with "Socks." Rumor has it that Jim Ballentine and "Mully" Mulhalond have been rushed by Sigma Xi. "Bill" Zabriskie and "Don" Tylee have been tutoring but failed to pull out of the class of poor students. However, due to that last name of his, "Bill" is seldom called upon by his professors.

Goddard would undoubtedly have been declared the most saintly, but who ever saw a fat angel?—therefore we must concede the honor to George Anderson.

In four years Liskow and Haller have changed very little and to them rightfully belongs the honor of being our class freshmen.

Trials for our best athletes have not come off yet, but Goddard and Estes have been seen in track suits training for the event.

Our two class humorists, McMaster and "Gundy" have long been known and the outcome of the vote was as expected.

Personal cards labelled "Vote for me" have aided us considerably in selecting Murphy, Kniskern and Hurley as our shrewdest politicians.

It has long been a question in our minds as to how Ted Weager and "Strech" Fletcher got their names in the Senior list. But four years of consistent bluffing has placed them among us. Along this line Doc. Pierce and Eddie Escott deserve honorable mention.

Digitized by Google

Although five hen-pecked ones are among us still we all have a chance at the matrimonial game.

During our scare of Colon Germs, we learned that "Balty" Browne and Tim Flanigan placed orders for distilled water and Morry Quinn and Andy Anderson had tickets to membership in the Imperial Club. Glad to see you reformed, boys.

An international debating team has been organized among us and in the last debate Beloborodoff and Nowakowski were opposed to Valenzuela and Revoredo. Vladimir and Novy held the floor most of the time, but the judges decided that no point had been made.

Our agony quartette was composed of Balty Browne, first base, Bill Hurley second base, Al Towar home plate and Lew Kniskern High Bawl.

We are glad to see our faculty baseball squad practicing daily in the cat-hole ampitheatre and from late reports the following will undoubtedly secure regular positions:

Special to the 1910 Michiganensian. (Copywronged.)

"Ump says 'play ball'." Cobalt Johnson runs out and sweeps off home plate with his derb. Sadler goes to bat while Cooley limbers up on the side lines. Sadler hit by a pitched ball and "goes up in the air." Catcher "Doc" Pierce makes a frantic effort and catches him on the fly, but Bartlett contests the point and "Umps" Davis rules Sadler out and Bartlett off the field. Cooley knocks a clean two-bagger. "Zippy" foxily hides the ball under his shirt, thereupon Escott amid much enthusiasm leads the bleachers in a siren. (As a sirener he has "Sully" backed off the boards.) Verner goes to the bat and knocks a clean hit to right field. "Johnnie" Schmutz gets tangled up in the tall grass and before he can get the ball home, Verner has circled the bases twice, showing that he is back in his old running form.

Loud cheers from the stands.

Higbee goes to the bat and fans out.

Umps calls the game on account of darkness and is nearly mobbed by the players.

History of the Senior Medical Class

WILLIAM made me comfortable upon the table in the anaesthetic room. Over in the amphitheatre I could hear the low sound of Dr. de Nancrede's voice as he explained the method of procedure to my classmates. The steady hum of his voice was interrupted now and then by the sound of uneasy shifting among my white-coated classmates as they tried to find soft spots on the hard seats; from an occasional boisterous laugh, I knew the Doctor had cracked a new joke. Townsend was assigned the anaesthetic, and from the putting on of the cone I experienced the sensation of a cool bath in the Huron, for "Towny" certainly knows how to keep an ether cone dripping all the time. I felt the world going 'round and 'round, and while I was unconscious, I lived again the four years at old Michigan.

As soon as I lost consciousness of the world without, my soul, I thought, which seemed at first to be diffused throughout my body, began to draw itself upward, beginning at the feet. It passed through the veins of my legs and abdomen to the heart, which was beating like a thousand drums, and thence by the aorta and carotids to the brain, whence it emerged by the fissures of the skull into the outer air. No sooner was it free than it gathered itself together (into what form I could not say) and with incredible speed shot backward until it reached what seemed to be the verdant body of myself way back in the fall of nineteen-six. I was rubbing elbows with a crowd of earnest-looking fellows in the odoriferous amphitheatre of the new medical building. These were my classmates and we were assembled to hear the opening address and to gaze with reverence and awe upon our Dean and the others who made up the faculty. The fame of these men had long before spread to the towns and cities from whence we came, but here we were face to face for the first time. Since then we have been face to face on many divers occasions; but let us not tarry here.

Not many days after we first began to absorb the irrepressible odor of the anatomy "lab", a class election was held and before the smoke of conflict had cleared away there sat "Major" Dugan upon the throne. Major ruled with an iron hand, for who has ever dared to gainsay "Jerry" in anything. The honor system was adopted and proved to be all that its most ardent supporters hoped for it. We have kept it in force ever since, even if we have had to fight hard for it. We recognized the need of suitable engravings to aid in the study of anatomy and presented a complete series of engravings to the university. Dr. Stiles was with us then and when he left for other fields, it was with regret that we, his friends, saw him leave. We wished him success and God speed.

Our first long vacation came none too soon. We were tired and longed to see the home town again, and we did. C. C. McClelland, our dear old "Mac", just naturally drifted into the president's chair in our Sophomore year. "Mac" was a married man and from out of his fund of experience, counselled us wisely and brought us through a successful year.

Just at this moment my body became wrapped in an indescribable tension, a tension which grew more and more acute. I must have moved on the table in my agony. I remember now. We were taking Pathology lectures and were holding daily communion with our friend, Dr. Warthin. This feeling gradually wore away and I drifted on through the living of those good old years again. Oh, yes! we had a banquet at the Cook House that year. Drs. Vaughan, Edmunds and Stiles were our chaperones and helped us spend an enjoyable evening. E. G. C. Williams, our own "Alphabet Bill", reported the big banquet to the Daily. It was a glowing account, for "Bill" was on the Daily staff and certainly could write the proper "dope." We had another little party this year that "Bill" did not report. It was a happy little musicale held across the river. Hudnutt's rendition of the "Holy City" was surely well received and loudly applauded.

Another vacation spent with a different girl and we were back again. How good it seemed to hear the old familiar, "when did you get back?" We were soon back into the game. "Big" Nichols, by virtue of his six foot seven and never-failing smile, became leader of our now famous class. "Nick's" two hundred and seventy odd kept everybody happy, even though "Stan" Cox, our cashier, stuck everybody for "four bits." We had dodged class dues before, but there was no getting away from "Stan", he had us coming and going.

This year saw the coming of Dr. Hewlett, whose cheerful and every ready willingness to give us a helping hand has made him a universal friend.

Another banquet, this time at Linda Vista, broke the monotony of our work. Ferris Smith, as toastmaster, kept us in a happy frame of mind with his ready wit and new stories, thus turning the rainy night into one of the brightest times of our college course. On the diamond our team won glory and renown. "Southpaw Cooley's" fade-away spitter had them all guessing and we came as near as possible to winning the flag. Giddings and "John T" Sullivan were bingling out long drives for the varsity while "Dimmie" Hodgen was starring at the hurdles.

A sudden roaring began in my ears, a sudden tension again seemed to grip my soul. I was regaining consciousness and faintly remember Giddings, who had been gazing longingly at hymen's altar, and had summoned up enough courage during the vacation to take unto himself a bride. As a reward for this prowess our class made him president for the senior year. The horrors of "Path" had given away to the nightmares of neuritis, myelitis, "Hy", and neurasthenia as given in "Potts." I was developing "nervous symptoms" with the rest of my class. I was commenting with a few of my classmates on the great improvement the new Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat ward would be to our hospital and about the improvements in the maternity ward when suddenly the dream collapsed, like a house of cards, and I seemed to be in darkness and alone, being dragged down, down, by the cord which attached my soul to my body. At the same time, the roaring in my ears increased, and I saw my body, as I thought, like a fearful wild beast with open jaws; it swallowed me down and I awoke with a shock to find myself in Room 2, West Hall, with "Frenchy" La Bine shaking me and asking me for my senior dues. "Frenchy" never lost an opportunity to get the money.

The operation was successful, my "con" had been removed, and here we are but a few months away from the wide, wide world. How short these years have been and yet how full of work and play. It takes pluck for any man to stick through the four years of a "Medic's" college course. And if it takes pluck for a man what must it take for a woman? Our two "girls" deserve the admiration of the class and we unite in praising them.

The glorious spring days in this old Ann Arbor town are yet to come, the strenuous days of studying are nearly over, just a few months beyond looms that fleeting thing the world calls success. We are still too much engrossed with the toil and pleasure of our college days to worry about those years to come; but when at last we pass through the parted curtains and step out into this "world", may the lessons we have learned and the friendships we have gained, as classmates in the class of 1910, be the inspiration to walk upright and help us to add in some measure to the glory of "dear old Michigan."

Last Election of 1910 Medical Class

NOT since the day when "Major" Charles Borromeo delivered his Patrick Henry speech on abolishing all politics from class elections has such interest been aroused as in this our last election.

For the most popular man, "Sunset" Palmer showed the other twenty aspirants that his shining light for four years had had the desired effect, and he was awarded the honor with a good majority. "Tug" Wilson was second, while "Rabbi" Koenigsberger, Cox, Williams and Giddings also ran.

The contest for the most popular girl clearly demonstrated the fact that "our girls" still are neck and neck in the race which started in the fall of '06. The question of deciding the most popular one was perplexing when there are but two and when these two have been equally "good fellows" in the full sense of the term. The count showed a "tie vote," or as one member put it, "I can't decide," shows very truly the sentiment of the class.

Laning is declared the most persistent fusser and he is proud of it. One thoughtless wretch voted for Foden. (Don't tell his wife, please!)

When it comes to deciding whether or not a girl is the jolliest in the class, it requires more than a class-room acquaintance usually. Those qualities are best brought out in one's private practice after several calls have been made. This probably explains the fact that appearances do not count for much as "Miss Dobson" won this honor easily. "Miss Dickie Taylor," "Carrie Phillips" and "Sister" Haskell all had their loyal supporters, but these were not numerous enough to land the prize. The vote showed that handsome men are numerous in the class of 1910. The choice fell upon Bill Wolcott with 25 votes. "Shorty" Moore and Cox got one vote apiece. Looks suspicious, doesn't it? "Lucy DeWitt" is declared to be our prettiest girl, with Percival Dobson a close second. In explanation to "Olga" and Gertrude the committee desires to state that some of the class understood that "Girl" meant "girlish" or that period of adolescence when kilts and skirtettes are worn by all children regardless of sex.

Cummings was declared our best student after a hard and close race from "Our Girls." For the other extreme Haskell had clear sailing from the start. The finish wasn't even close. "Father Bart" and Agnew were present with three apiece.

Our most saintly student is no less than genial Thomas Matthews. Tom Joyce was in the running and would have won, I'm told, had the nurses been allowed to vote.

The worst knocker is "Red" Palmer. This habit, his friends say, he has been "treating symptomatically" until the case is a relatively mild one. He thinks the next attack may be aborted.

In this large class of near doctors, thirteen men were mentioned as deserving the title "Class Freshmen." "Jason Anson Jewet Hall" received the title by a large majority, however. For consistent day in and out work Hall deserves the plum.

Our best athlete is Demi Hogden. for whom we all voted for his prowess in skimming the sticks. Giddings in baseball was second. Agnew in weights. Foden and Bartholomew in the sprints.

The "Peerless One" is our class humorist with 25 votes. The "Great Joe Labung." Shepherd and D. O. Smith are mentioned as fit subjects for this honor.

There has been but one shrewd politician in our class from start to finish, as the class testified by electing E. G. C. Williams. When occasion demanded the man with the big voice and dark deep methods was Dugan, who was given second place.

Digitized by Google

The erstwhile loyal subject of Queen Victoria and the possessor of many insignia on his arms received a large majority for the most successful bluffer. Friar Foden, the King of all bluffers, learned this art, I'm told, when entertaining one of the maidens of the Queen's party aboard a ship when her Majesty was circumnavigating the globe. The same bluff is working still.

Haskell is sure to become famous in Pediatrics. As an authority upon the lacteal fluids we expect his name to be emblazoned upon the head stones of all good cows who have died in the service. James Casper Negley is said to have a grand chance for becoming famous. This master tonsorial artist, it is said, was driven into the practice of surgery by the invention of the Safety Razor, but with a technique already mastered for wielding the delicate instrument his success as a Medical Man who operates is assured.

The race for the first man to get married could not be decided by the votes of the class. At least ten men are holding their breath until Commencement day when they can write M.D. after their names and say, "with all my worldly goods I thee endow." Cummings, Nichols, Laning, Braley, Ward and F. N. Smith have the Girl, and the Time and the Place.

The first girl to get married is really left to Olga and Gertrude. One member said "Both." Another said, "there wasn't a chance." Most of the class left this question unanswered and thought as one man "put it," "I give it up."

* * * *

Dr. Parker is our favorite professor as shown by a large vote. His congeniality and unquestioned fairness has won for him the kindest feelings of every senior.

De de Nancrede, Dr. Vaughan, Dr. Hewlett and Dr. Warthin all are held in highest esteem, as shown by the vote.

In deciding what course most was derived from, two members voted "Boulevard."

If not yourself who would you rather be? confirmed the report that this is a fickle and envious class. Many aspired to John D.'s place in the world. Others wanted to be Jim Jeffries, "Pat," Bill Hanselman, Dr. Cook. One man with three initials is satisfied with his accomplishments and voted "myself."

In collecting the most successful excuses of the class, "Busy," "Surgery Section," "lack of time," "Path Lab," "Mat cases," "Emergency operations" have all worked well. "Gastric Neurosis" is Cox's standby, while the married men all voted "Sickness in the family."

Seventy-five per cent of the class ought never to have had a con according to the votes. A few conscientious men like LaBine and Negley stated that they should have gotten one in Lectures on Surgical Instruments, but no others.

Only one man doesn't deserve a diploma and why that is I don't know unless he's afraid to be let loose on the unsuspecting public. The girls said "Yes, and a medal."

One is surprised in the uniformity in the color of the hair in this class. "Gray is the color and the cause the first semester's examination in Nervous."

The question, "Do you look like a student?" was answered in many ways. The majority said "of course" or "only at Exam times." One put it, "I am a student." Another said, "No, like a Doctor." Miss Welton said "Yes, like a grind." One said, "I hope not any longer."

History of Senior Dental Class

WHEN the Daily came out one morning four years ago, with the ad "Wanted—A phenomenal class to represent the university"—it little knew how soon that ad would be answered.

The first day of the next school year every one knew that that class had come, when the 1910 Dents took the town by storm. They arrived from every city and every village in the country. Every one was the pick of his or her section and the result showed that the competition had been keen.

No one was a dullard—No one was a laggard—Every one was a student—Every one was a star.

The class was truly a history maker in the dental department. We entered athletics and starred, we made honorary societies look sick.

The freshman year commenced and "Damn it" Fisher was chosen president. His influence and good judgment gave us a glorious send-off into university life. The first week was a hard one. The strange life, reinformed by the sophomore hazers, meant difficulties and troubles to overcome. We passed through our initiation and became full-fledged members of the university.

Then we settled down to work. The "lab" work, recitations and mid-night grinding came in one monotonous turn. Each one we took up as a matter of fact and did it. From Whit's—"Mud-mixing Parlors" to Professor Cole's Chemical mysteries we marched without a faltering step—histology and organic were each conquered in their turn.

The next year we left the old tradition haunted building from which dozens of dentists had graduated before our time—We entered the grand new structure which had been built for us—a fitting memorial to our glorious class.

"Percy" Roth as president in the junior year, withstood with the rest of the class, the slaughter of Norey's destructive plague. Rallying from this, the class entered upon its third and last year with "Dad" Ahrens as leader. Dean Hoff's pleasant smiles and Dr. Loefflers' congenial ways have lightened the burdens of the last year. When we separate and go out into the world to commence our life's work, we will still hold fond memories of Dr. Ward's little tin whistle, which marked the close of each day's work.

Our college days will soon be over. Friends who have met in the class rooms will soon be parted. College victories and College troubles will soon be history. They will pass from our real life in a single night. We will soon walk the "labs" for the last time.

Memories above will exist, but in those memories there will live a love for our class, for our department, and above all, for our university which even "Time" cannot efface.

Dental Crowns (Brass)

IT is not a hard matter to get together information about the members of the class who have distinguished themselves by becoming famous or infamous. Every one seems willing to testify against his neighbor and the consensus of opinion is here shown.

All the year "Dad" Ahrens and "Len" Murray, (who hails from a hole in the woods up north and is the image of a "good fellow") did their best pulling so as to be in on the last few college honors distributed to the seniors each year and after a close race "Len" pulled out a little ahead and is now hailed as the most popular man. There being but three girls in the class, there was considerable deliberation over the matter of honoring them. Now if the class had done what most classes do they would have divided the honors equally among the three. We are different, we let the girls draw lots and they won't tell us which one was elected. "Sadie" Rempes smiles when questioned. We believe she drew prettiest girl; Margaretha Knapper, popular girl, and Elizabeth Floeter, jolliest girl. There was no question as to the first girl to be married. Margaretha has been Knapper quite a while.

No question about the most persistent fusser. "Fusser" Cady knows all the girls' phone numbers. He calls three up regularly and has been doing so ever since he was a freshman. That was not so very long ago, however.

No one wanted to recommend anyone besides himself for the honor of being the "best student in the class" and also the "most saintly." However, it got around that Broadbrooks was being rushed by Phi Beta Kappa and so the unerring judgment of the faculty was taken into consideration and "Broady" was at least eliminated from the ranks of the "worst students." "Kirk" Kirkland is undoubtedly the man who was meant for the pulpit and none envy him the job of being the "most saintly," as there is too much responsibility accompanying it. "Swede" Olsen has been "taking gas" outside the front door in order to escape Dean Hoff's cigarette eye, for so long that he is qualified to be the most successful bluffer of the class with faint opposition from "Ed" Douglass. "Fritz" Rogers received the highest count in the election of the shrewdest politician and "Dad" Selleck is generally acknowledged as the man most likely to become famous. Cummings always stands outside of the class room door until someone hears him, which is not long, and so is well worthy of being called the worst knocker.

Among the favorite professors "Bob" Howell and Professor Yutzy were in the lead with "Doc" Howell a little bit "the best fellow," because as "Mark" Baker, the class freshman, remarked, "We don't see quite so much of him." "Doc" Darling used to stay away from the class room the first fifteen minutes in order that "Lottie" Lotz, the class humorist, might pull off a little comedy to prepare the class for the words of wisdom—"Well, is everybody here this morning?—no excuse at all for absences."

Professor Novy's course in bacteriology is undoubtedly the most useful and really everyone agreed that it was the course from which we got the most benefit.

Strange to say several seniors admitted that they did not deserve diplomas, though they said they would not refuse them.

The great men whose examples the members of the class would like to follow are too numerous to mention.

History of the Senior Pharmacy Class

OUR stay at Michigan has been short, but eventful. Our history has just begun, in fact it is no history but only a preface.

For the sake of the preface we must recall to our minds when for the first time, "10" was enrolled and precipitated upon the highways and hedges of Ann Arbor. It was a wild and motley crew gathered together from the four quarters of the earth. Men of repute, however, were in the multitude.

First and conspicuous, "Bill" Longstaff who always missed his breakfast for an eight o'clock. Then comes "Queen Victoria", rather noisy at times, especially after football victories. There's our big "Jay", the ponderous and the pretty. Next we have "Ownie" a choice young man and goodly—somewhat of a bluffer when caught without the goods. Then we have "Eben" the Silent, especially fond of "qual". We are all proud of "Ben" our Ypsi fusser. No one can forget "Carp's" smiling face or "Arch" Frame's winning ways.

One short semester and the much feared exams were on. The various phases of that short week we will not attempt to describe. When it was over we were all pleased with the experience. Furthermore, we were now members of the university in good standing.

During the second semester parties and smokers made us forget our more serious duties.

At the opening of our senior year we expected to be located in our new quarters, but the characteristic slowness of the plumbers prevented the realization of our hopes. We have gradually moved over and now are fully installed in our grand new building and we will be the first class to be graduated therefrom.

There are numerous events which might be woven into this history of our noble class, but for the lack of space and time, we cannot relate them. Some of the minor details may be forgotten, but who of us could forget Ypsi and its many charms; the long tramps around the Boulevard, the Huron or "Red" Oliver? We have all had these experiences, and they are so familiar that they will always occupy a prominent place in our minds.

From the first, "10" got into the spirit and life of the university. She has observed all college customs and has done everything to keep them alive for all succeeding classes. Our career as students is nearly at an end and our stay here has been all too short for its pleasures.

"Though we have squandered what was dear,
Though useless goals have cost us much,
God bless the chance that threw us here,
The luck that made our shoulders touch."

Pharmic Pills

DOPE'S been flying over the beakers ever since the senior prescriptions came out. A few had support "corralled" early in the game. Others tried to line it up for a heavy finish. Some turned out versatile as they make 'em. Others showed just single eccentricities. The few who were peculiar got in; the others, "hoot-mon," bye-bye! We can't use u'ns. This medicine is for those which is sickerest. I've got a long story to tell. No, I'm tired. I'll just give facts.

Popular class? Well some. Every man in the class got one vote, except—"Bill" Jay, voted twice for hisself. "Leo" Goodell was heavy favorite for "handsome man" (counting in the faculty support). Harry Woodring ran him a "chin-and-chin," if the judges allow him to count the votes he got for the prettiest girl. Hope they don't, "Angel Face." I pulled for you! Gave you five for most popular "Co-ed." Harry Cary, you're a fusser. How much we don't know. "Still water gathers no moss." (For proof of his popularity walk across the campus with him—"Howdy-do, Howdy-do, Girls!"—"Oh! There he is girls.")

Do you know why Keene Fitzpatrick went to Princeton? It was gossiped that Guy Bailey's been trying to fix his credits to finish up there. Keene'll get him out yet and then goodbye Sheridan, Flannigan and Horner.

Julius Kramer confided his ambitions, and he will be famous if confidence will help at all. His future is "on ice." Ambitions are not votes. One of our cohorts has it stowed away. He's going to change the name Park-Davis to J. J. Z. If work would do it, here's to our prize student, George Carpenter. Have you seen the glimmer of his light while other men were abed? "Ben" Kuyers swears that he draws circles on a book with his nose instead of sleeping. Phi Beta Kappa rushed him until they found he was only a Pharmic.

"Bill" Longstaff threw his support for a return of votes on "toughest guy" but it was not called for on the prescription so he got "most saintly." The landslide came on the first few ballots. After that, oh my! Unanimous.

Who the wit was that put Eber H. Wisner down as "first-to-get-married-man" had a bum hunch. He's our humorist or there is going to be a fight. He never said anything that wasn't humorous. He did grunt three times one day when he was overly talkative.

Oh yes, nearly forgot our "class freshman." odds were six to one on Lloyd Owens before the election. We'll cover all you've got now. There is one more on the list, but gosh, I'm tired, apologies boys—not!!

So long!

History of Senior Homœopathic Class

ON September 25, 1906, there met in Ann Arbor a group of fifteen freshmen for the Homœopathic Medical Department destined to be known collectively as the homœopathic class of 1910. It is the college history of this class and its members that we propose to trace.

Upon organization its members were as follows: Thomas Bell, Frank John Colgan, Roy Glenn Devoist, Marion Densmore, Lewis Eichee Klingon, William Lewis Rhonehouse, Allen Donald Rowe, Leo Frank Secrist, Charles H. Stocking, Harry Lawrence Parker, Roy Odell Knapp, Silbert Leroy Welch, Joseph Agustine O'Conner, Otis Leroy Morris, and Edward Alvin Miller.

At the beginning of the sophomore year of the class of 1910 it was found that Morris, Devoist, Densmore, Klingon, Stocking and Watts were no longer enrolled, but new acquisitions in the persons of Edward Percy Case, A.B., Florence Authreholt Stone, and Zina Leslie Gilding made the sophomore class number twelve. The class was reorganized with O. L. Morris as president, Roy O. Knapp as vice-president, G. H. Welch as secretary, J. A. O'Conner as treasurer, E. A. Miller as historian.

Of those who failed to return and enroll as sophomores, Morris had gone to the University of West Virginia, Devoist was not in college (he has since enrolled with the class of 1914), Densmore had disappeared, Klingon had gone to an eastern medical school, Stocking was not in college, Watts not in college. At this time Rhonehouse began to develop possibilities as a politician, and Rowe as a musician, while Miller developed a liking for the society of the fair ones, and Parker became a favorite among the nurses at the hospital.

The junior year began with Bell, Case, Colgan, Gilding, Knapp, Miller, O'Conner, Parker, Rhonehouse, Rowe, Secrist, Stone, and Welch enrolled.

J. A. O'Conner became president, F. A. Stone vice-president, Roy O. Knapp secretary and historian, Zina L. Gilding treasurer.

During this year Case made researches tending to show that arterio-sclerosis may occur in a hair follicle. In Colgan those qualities began to bud which have already developed so far as to indicate that in him we have one of whom great things can be expected. The others pursued the even tenure of their ways.

H. L. Parker, E. A. Miller, F. J. Colgan, and R. O. Knapp remained in Ann Arbor during the summer of 1909, as junior internes at the hospital, Knapp taking in addition the position of assistant in the hospital laboratory.

At the beginning of the senior year of this class the number and names were the same as during the junior year. With class work and clinics and hospital service each member has been kept constantly busy, and each one goes away feeling that he has received his share of practical experience along medical and surgical lines. One's senior experience in the Homœopathic Hospital amounts practically to that obtained during service as a graduate interne in many other hospitals.

Who is Who in the Homœopathic Class

ABOVE all the other qualities for which the doctors of homeopathic persuasion who quitted the University in the spring of 1910 must be noted, is modesty. The only doubt concerning this is as to whether it should not better be termed professional reserve. When the time came for them to attack that most interesting of all tasks, the telling of what we think about ourselves, most of them refused to admit that they had ideas or opinions worthy of consideration.

"Doing dressings" has been the plaint of most of the class when lessons were not prepared as assigned and so successful has it been that feeling of self-confidence has been engendered which leads them to believe also that they look like students.

Satisfied with their exterior they are positive that they deserve the sheepskins whick mark them as sons of Aeschupulas and do not hesitate to say so forcibly.

In the race for places in the class hall of fame none was closer than the fight for the honor of being declared the most popular girl in the class. Miss Stone received one more vote than Flossie Stone, proving that the men of the class are formal fussers and that they are gallant toward their only girl.

Among the even dozen of men, who, together with the most popular girl, make up the class which faced the thirteen hoodo, the contest for renown was spirited. Bell gave away more cigars, but as Colgan displayed a seductive handshake the fight was even and the two ran a dead heat for the honor of being declared "the most popular man." The same pair entered the beauty show but here Bell proved his supremacy. He is accused, however, of making unfair use of the massage cream. The Irish won the Sunday school honors, O'Connor being declared the most saintly man by a wide margin.

Miller is without doubt the funny man. Knapp had designs on the distinction but his chances were ruined when a page from the Ladies' Home Journal was found on his person. His chances were also injured by the machinations of Parker, Secrist and Rhonehouse, knockers par excellence.

An overworked youth, who is commonly portrayed as wearing wings and a smile, is thought to have designs on Gilding whose classmates have little hopes of keeping him in the ranks of the Benedicts.

Our Entrance

HOW few of us as Seniors can look back and recall the first impression we had of Michigan, the happenings of the first day and the succeeding days of our Freshman year.

Four years is not a long time, and yet the mention of our Freshman year brings forth a sigh and many times a wish that once more we were Freshmen, just for a day. Memory alone will not bring back the events of those happy days. How fortunate that we were thoughtful enough to keep diaries—or was it thoughtfulness? I wonder if it was not the wish of some little girl back home that prompted us? It was her desire, that since we were going away to be "real live college men," and would not be home to see her again until Thanksgiving vacation, that we should write to her every day, or "if our studies would keep us too busy for that, then we could keep a diary and write every other day and tell her everything we did the two days before." Don't you remember? Foolish, now that we are Seniors, I know, but we were Freshmen then and it was different. No doubt, by spring vacation we received a letter from her thanking us for being so good to her and telling of her engagement to some other fellow. She was old enough to be your mother anyway, was she not?

There are many things that are brought to mind that we did not write in those diaries. We shall not mention them now; our ideas upon them have changed during the past few years and we don't look upon them in the same light.

Do you remember how we started out to look for a room? Those "dear, sweet landladies" who greeted us with a smile and assurance that her rooms were the best in town—pleasant, airy, good light, good beds and plenty of heat? And then even offered to put in another dollar table if we would promise to take the room at once. Yes, she would even treat us as she would treat her own boys. (How glad we are that we are not her boys.) Then do you remember the first day we tried to find our way around the campus and through the various buildings? How we frequently had to stop and consult our handbook? Those were good times. Perhaps in crossing one of the many walks you would get a slight sign of recognition from some petite little Freshman girl who was used to speaking to the fellows in school at home. How many times we have wished that that little Freshman girl had recognized us as fellow students during her sophomore year, her junior year —and probably her senior year. I do not believe it would have done any harm. If the same spirit could be instilled into the student body would Michigan not be a much pleasanter place?

Then next came the nights we sneaked out to catch sophs. It took courage, but who would be willing to go home and not have a good true story about the Fresh-Soph scraps we participated in.

Do you remember how we felt when we first saw we were spending our allowances faster than they were coming in and found ourselves broke? Not until then were we duly initiated college men. (If you are still in good standing you are probably still broke.)

What did your landlady say the first time you let your rent run a week over time?—You need not tell me, mine said the same. Say, do you remember, too, that she said the rooms would be kept warm? Did she do it? Mine forgot it with the first frost.

Open your scrap book and turn back to those first pages. You find the crown cut from your Freshman cap. It was with the air of a king you walked home from State street wearing that cap the day you bought it. That was an identification mark that told the whole world you were a student in the University of Michigan, what matter if only a Freshman?

How our pride swells when we think of the Fresh-Soph rush and the pictures Lyndon took of the crowd afterward. How you tried to get in the front row and, if you did not think you looked tough enough, you tore your shirt (if you had any left) a little more and put a little more mud on your face. Honestly, just how many of those pictures did you send away to be admired?

Things went along pretty well while Football season was on. It did not take long to learn the songs and yells (especially that Ypsi yell). We entered into the spirit of things and care-free and happy we went through the weekly routine. Christmas came; we went home to see the folks. We bought the usual Michigan suit case label which Freshmen buy. We stuck it on our suit cases so everybody might see it. Perhaps we turned our trousers up just a little higher than we wore them around the campus. You see we had to come up to the expectations of those at home who had only seen the poster pictures of "College Life."

It was not long from January until the end of the semester. We never will forget those first conditions. How many did you get? Really should not have had any, but, "who wants to go through college and make Phi Beta Kappa?" We know better now, of course, and it was probably that first condition that has kept us in the University the remaining three years and a half. To the fellows we joked about it and told them all about how perfectly "lovely" (used advisedly) the professor was who "stung" us. And yet, honestly, did we not feel a little ashamed of ourselves when we were alone in our rooms, writing to father and mother and telling them we failed in one, two, or three, etc., courses? Then we decided we had been on the artificial side of "College." I believe that was really the time we entered upon our "College Life;" then we began to realize why father and mother were so anxious for us to come to college. Didn't we brace up? And say, did not the letter we received from the secretary of the department after we had gone home in June saying we had successfully passed all the courses we took the second semester repay us for that extra brace we took, and was there not a lot of satisfaction in telling our little brothers and sisters that those posters we brought home illustrating "College Life" were probably the best cartoons obtainable?

Never will we forget that night of all nights, "Cap Night." That was the great event of the year. We had been working all year for it.—For the time when we would no longer be freshmen, but sophomores. Somehow after wearing that little grey cap through the year we had become attached to it. It had won a place in our hearts and we sighed at the thought that we were to cast it into the big fire and watch it, together with many others, disappear into smoke and ashes. It was a sad parting. We were proud to be sophomores, yet we wanted that cap for memory's sake. Most of us cut out the crowns with the buttons, no matter what the color, and stowed them away for places in our scrapbooks. The remainder we offered up in the sacrifice. We were proud and yet a little mournful as we fell into line that evening and started the long march to "Sleepy Hollow." Proud that we were to be sophomores; mournful that those happy freshman days were fast drawing to a close. Before us was a line three years long. Would we ever reach the end? Huge was the fire, and the strange shadows cast by the flames gave the whole scene a weird setting. We heard the speakers admonish us to be careful as to what we should and should not do the three remaining years of our course. As to whether we profited by these words we cannot say. I fear that we did not, for, sad but true, some sat with us around that fire that are not with the class today. Some left for one reason, others another. Not all were bad.

Those of us who did march in the long line, who added our contribution of grey cloth to the fire, and later paraded the streets as sophomores, look back and think that "Cap Night" of the year 1907 was truly a glorious ending of the freshman days of the class of 1910.

Our Exit

AS THE time of the departure from their University of a body of men who have been banded together for several years draws near, a retrospective view of that period is time well spent. Most of us who are about to leave Michigan forever are now nearing the point at which preparation ceases and the real earnest work of the world becomes a part of our daily life. Has our time here, our work and play, strengthened us and fitted us little by little to meet the problems which are inevitable, and on the successful solution of which our success in life depends? Unless we have been so strengthened the time spent here has been time wasted.

And yet, it is not the daily lessons we have learned, the mystery of science or the language of the Greeks, that is to be the determining factor in our future. These things have value, a great and lasting value, yet how many of us, a few years hence, can pause for a moment and recall in detail these things which now are a part of our lives? Nor will our share in college activities, outside the classroom, successful as it may have been, alone be enough to establish ourselves in the world outside. However serious and important these things are to us while here, to the great busy world of men and women they are mere play: complex, and requiring in a measure skill and perhaps thought, but as compared with real life, only play.

The solution then, to the question, whether or not our time here has been well spent, depends upon the answer to another. Have the things we have studied, the tasks disposed of, the things accomplished, combined to instill in us the desire and the ability to face a situation squarely, to meet it promptly and (more important than all) to always play fair and give the other fellow the square deal?

In this lies the real value of a college course, the shaping and moulding of character. If our work and play here in Michigan has accomplished that end, then their value can never be measured, or their results computed. Combined with the knowledge attained, our success is assured if we but follow the well-defined path in which we have started.

It will be years before the full realization of these things is brought home to us. One must be far away to obtain a view point from which he can see and understand things of such magnitude. Then, and not until then, will we appreciate what Michigan has done for us, whose days here are numbered.

Loyalty is one of the attributes of a civilized and refined society. There is none to whom our loyalty is due in a higher degree than the college whose colors we wear and which has given to us freely training to aid us in our life's work. Michigan is the one tie that binds us all.

Alma Mater, we who are about to leave you, turn, and with one parting look, salute you. Ever will we, sons and daughters of so great a mother, be loyal. Forget you never, but ever revered and loved, the hand that has shaped our lives is yours.

Dooley on Michigan Spirit

T'S mesilf phwat sez thet the Univorsoity iv Meechigan is a great institoosion, Hennessy, an afore I git through 'ith me argiment t'is yersilf phwat 'ill jine in the yellin' 'ith me.

Daid yez iver sthop an think phwat 'ud 'ave 'appened if Mister Angeel had not decided t' move here t' thes beutiful city iv Ann Arbor an open up 'is boarding school fer Day Pupils? Ye see it was quite a long time ago before the War iv the Rebillion thet Mister Angeel an Ginneral Ypsilanti was walking down Wood'ard Avenue in Deetroit discussin' th' wither an' the Base Ball game.

"Nay, Nay, Dooley," sez Hennessy, "the Base Balls were not yit thin, it must iv been somethin' ilse they was discussing besides thet."

"Th' Divil do I care, they was a discussin' an' I know thet. Ainy way, Mister Angeel an the Ginneral were discussin' an' Mister Angeel suggested they form a thrust an' control the idicational indistry iv this great and noble United Sthates. And phwat did they do but decide upon Ann Arbor as a fit place f'r th' main office iv th' compiny.

"Twas aisy sailin' thin ut was in sillin' the stock an starthin th' factiry. All 'ud 'ave been well 'f the Indins, bad cess t' thim, had not starthed the War 'f th' Rebillion and created th' muss. As t' wither they was objectin' t' th' larnin' I cain't say but their objectins 'nd rebillions was so strinuous thet Ginneral Ypsilanti was forced t' go out an' tache th' haithins honesty an' idication 'ith a gun er pich fork an' flail.

"Right ye air thin," sez Hennessy.

'f course I'm right, t'is divil a wanst d'ye foind me wrong, but whist a whoile do ye mind? T'is a bit 'f th' sintimint thet is here now.

"T'was here thet Ginneral Ypsilanti came back fr'm th' woods an' sez t' Mister Angeel, "Mister Angeel, an' 't was a great 'an noble day school yez 'ave made 'f Ann Arbor while I was away 'n me pleasure trip, an' it's not f'r me, a proud man fr'm th' House 'f Ypsilanti, phwat 'ud take 'ny iv y'ur cridit fr'm yez. No more 'ud I thank iv sindin' mesilf t' Yrup t' be marrin' me daughther t' a furrin Dook t' raise money f'r t' come back t' Ann Arbor. Mister Angeel, t'is you thet 'ave made Ann Arbor an institooshion of larnin' f'r the young men iv th' counthry at reduced rates. Ez I sid before, t'is not f'r a Ypsilantian phwat 'ill not take away iv yer'e glorry. "But Mister Angeel," sez he, "uv yez don't mind, I'll be f'r movin' me family over t' th' ither hill an' be starthin an iducational institoot f'r th' sisters iv ye'er pupils."

"And do you think Mister Angeel objected? No siree, he was thet true an' noble a man thet he sez, "Ginneral, I'm yer frind. We'el sthart yez up right." And Mister Angeel gave th' Ginneral three binches f'r the ladies to rist on and some books f'r th' library an' suggested thet 'f thimes were prosperous thet winter he 'ud build a trolley line over th' t' Ginneral's school th' n'xt year f'r th' use iv th' pupils iv Mister Angeel's Day School phwat wanted t' go over an' see their sisters.

"The Ginneral starthed th' cimit'ry f'r the young ladies on the hill and it has been there iver since. Mister Angeel built th' throlley th' next year, puttin' in branch lines t' Deetroit an' Jackison, (phorty cints wan way and phifty-foive t' ither though I sees no difference in th' distance) and they be sayin thet some 't th' brithers don't know whither th' is goin' t' Mister Angeel's er th' Ginneral's school.

"An' it's Hennessy phwat does remark about th' good naborly feelin' between th' two institootions, but thet is gittin' away fr'm me argimint.

"Hennessy," I remarked, "I was goin' t' show yez phwat a grand institootion of Larnin' th' day school iv Mister Angeel's is become.

"I do be tellin' yez, Hennessy, thet th' noble spirit thet Mister Angeel had 'as burried itself deep into th' manly hearts iv th' stoodents iv this school an' it does me heart good t' think I 'av been here. Shure an' this enthusiasm phwat Mister Angeel 'as innerjected int' th' viry soul iv th' institootion brings t' me recollection th' dago fable iv Aldin an' hes wanderful lamp. Yez must remember as 'ow th' lad took off the kiver iv th' contraption an' th' banshee wafted out in a shroud doin' one thing an' anither at th' wishes iv th' bye. Nothin' ther was thet it could not do. So it was 'ith Mister Angeel, Hennessy. I say, Hennessy, show me a grander man. Show me th' man, Hennessy, phwat could manipulate such a great corporation iv larnin'. Mister Angeel 'ud clean up 'es corrispondince in th' marnin, an' take a trip across th' water t, settil some furrin difficulty iv th' Unithed States in th' afternoon, an' be at his class 'th next marnin. It was Mister Angeel phwat opened th' doors iv th' little one room day school an' let hes noble self float around and fill the place with spirit and grow an' exphand. Twas thes spirit which caused th' wan horse buildin' t' spread south an' upward till ye see thet inspirin' edifice University Hall. Twas thes spirit which caused th' ither building t' branch out like th' nebular hipotheses an' fill the campus 'ith architeckeral masterpieces. Twas this newly engendered spirit which crowded some iv th' building so that they became disgusted an' moved off.

"Hennessy, th' spirit iv Meechigin 'as caused th' weakest little feller phwat iver come t' Meechigain t' swell 'ith pride 'till by th' time they starthed kickin' th' footballs around thet same little feller was th' biggest man on th' team an' could smash those fellers fr'm some iv th' indepindint institootions iv larnin' phwat come here to git acquainted 'ith Meechigin spirit an' football.

"Of course, Hennessy, it's not only th' byes thet 'ave become swelled 'ith spirit. It's iverything around the great day school. Why, th' campus swelled 'ith spirit in th' airly days so much thet it became necessary t' fence it in t' kape th' campus off th' streets. Siveral years ago th' Mayor iv th' town said 'let the whole town 'ave th' spirit 'an' they tore th' fences down.

"Phwat was onct th' wood shed swelled 'ith spirit until they found it big enough t' put thet part iv th' iddication which smells so loud 'ith chimistry.

"An', Hennessy, would yez believe it, thet onct whin an old man was back t' see hes old day school he said, 'Shurely th' atmosphere is strong. Why, ivery thing 'as spirit an' is swellin'. To show hes appriciation f'r th' larnin' th' old school gave h'm he threw a stone et th' Law Buildin'. Thet stone stuck thar an' Meechigin Spirit got ahold iv it an' it began t' swell until today look at it. Sthop, Hennessy, an' think. It is too big now t' remove fr'm th' campus an' th' regints is worried t' death t' think phwat will become iv th' campus in twenty-five years if thet old stone keeps on swellin' ith Meechigan Spirit.

"Why, Hennessy, me mesilf, Dooley, does feel thet spirit comin' over me an' it is I phwat wants t' go out on th' corner an' yell f'r some one t' turn off thes Meechigin inthusiasm before I outgrow mesilf.

"An', Hennessy, it's me bye phwats comin' t' Meechigin next year thet I do be feelin' proud iv. Me thinks 'twill do him good to walk around here where hes father walked and inhale th' air an' see th' beauchious trees; th' large buildins; th' shady walks an' watch th' little squirrels playin' around an' gatherin' nuts to kape thim fr'm starvin' this winter so they can live until next winter to gather more nuts and Meechigin Spirit.

"An they do say thet there was so much spirit around thet the byes said they ad some t' spare an' would like t' give th' ladies some of it. An' phwat did Mister 'Angeel do but decide thet the day school would be a good place t' have ladies come an' be larnin' how t' be idducated, an' he surprised th' byes one day by bringin' in a lot and now th' byes and girls absorb th'Meechigin Spirit together. An' Hennessy, it makes th' old campus look grand t' see ivery body an' iverything going around yellin' f'r Meechigin.

"An' jist think, Hennnessy me bye is comin' next year t' jine in th' shout."

Michigan-Pennsylvania Game

THERE have been bitterly fought, scoreless games in the history of football. There have been games that were mere social functions. There have been terrible humiliations, victories by narrow margins, winning points tallied in the last second of play, dashes the entire length of the field, and every other conceivable condition that can make a football game dramatic, but never in the history of the game has there been a clash that attracted and held the interest of the spectators as did the Michigan-Pennsylvania contest of 1909.

At seven minutes past two on the afternoon of November, the thirteenth, 1909, the Michigan football team lined up against the defenders of Pennsylvania's red and blue. It was the fourth time the Wolverines and Quakers had clashed. The three former contests had ended with no scores for Michigan, while the red and blue had varied their score each time from six points to twenty-nine.

At ten minutes after two on that afternoon, just three minutes from the time of the blowing of the first whistle, the Michiganders had accomplished what they had tried and failed to do in those other encounters. It was a kick-off—a fumble by Braddock, the Quaker left end—two plunges into the line—a beautifully executed forward pass—another attempt at left tackle, and Joe Magidsohn staggered across the Quaker goal line.

On the field was a Michigan team that was an unknown quantity. It had played reasonably good and unpardonable football. Smith at center, had learned how to pass the ball, standing in the aisle of a Pullman car while the Wolverines were racing towards the Atlantic. Other men were green. Dave Allerdice was wearing heavy bandages on his left hand that made his fingers useless.

Facing these men of Michigan was a team made up of seasoned football timber. They knew the game. They had played it in preparatory schools under competent coaches.

On the bleachers sat 5,000 Pennsylvania students, willing to wager their very souls that the red and blue would triumph. In the press stand sat subordinate writers from great eastern papers. Their superiors had not deemed the game important enough to warrant their attending. It would be Pennsylvania by a big margin, they opined.

A few students made the trip to Philadelphia. There were hardly enough to make a sound when rooting and yet Michigan yells could be heard again and again above the "Yea! Pennsylvania!" By good fortune the United States Battleship Michigan was lying in the harbor of Philadelphia on the day of the game. The marines from the good ship marched to the football field full two hundred and fifty strong to see the men from Michigan play football and win. They were loyal men who came ashore that day. Loyal to anything that bore the name of "Michigan." Their home was upon the ship that bore the name of that distant State. They were determined to see the name of Michigan honored. They came to Franklin Field with their band and sang songs and yelled and cheered the followers of Allerdice. We cannot overestimate the value of the loyal support given our team by those men. "They were from the best ship in the Navy, and had come to see Michigan win." Before the game had started they marched onto the field, band playing, each man carrying a maize and blue pennant, heads up and chests out. Their color-bearer stepped out and presented Dave Allerdice with the splendid silken flag that now hangs in the trophy room. These sailors were confident of victory for Michigan.

Down on the sidelines crouched Fielding H. Yost and Keene Fitzpatrick. The one had taught the Michigan players all the football his versatile brain could conjure; the other had fitted the men to stand a gruelling contest.

It was an erratic team against old players. It was uncertainty against certainty; it was coaching and determination against knowledge of football.

The game is history. Everyone knows how Billy Wasmund, playing his last game, piloted the Michigan men against the Quakers. Everyone knows of the desperate rally made by the Quakers which sent the ball across Michigan's goal. The game has been fought over hundreds of time since. The simple score of 12 to 6 does not tell the story. There have been men in the history of literature who would have been able to explain how the supporters of the maize and blue fought that afternoon. They could have described the relentless attack and vicious repulse that humbled the Quakers. Football is not a serious thing to many people, but the stand made by Allerdice and his men against Pennsylvania meant something. It meant that Michigan had had her fill of the dregs; she was on the climb again.

And then, after it was all over; after the time keepers had pierced the air with their shrill whistles and raced across the gridiron just as Billy was ready to send another play against the Quakers; after the beaten easterners had started to drag themselves from the field—after a dozen men had done so much to avenge Michigan, they, themselves, could not realize that they were victorious. For a moment they stood there as though dazed Dirty and tired and bruised, they were. The crowd had ceased yelling—the marines had stopped, for the moment, sending great joyous oaths across the field—The Pennsylvania students uncovered, were standing in their seats ready to sing ' Hail Pennsylvania!" into the face of defeat. The Michigan players saw none of this—They had beaten "Mike" Murphy's charges.

Suddenly Bill Casey turned around and aced Yost. Like a crowd of women they flocked around the coach. They hugged him, patted his cheeks and then, as a great wave of sound rolled out into the streets of the city from the watching thousands, they lifted Yost to their shoulders and while the battleship band played "Michigan, My Michigan", marched off the trampled field.

Minnesota Game

THAT jug, which was neither little nor brown, but which bore the score of the Michigan-Minnesota game of 1903, 6 to 6, and had been in the possession of the Gophers ever since, was not the only prize that Michigan won on a certain Saturday in November when they defeated Minnesota by a 15 to 6 score. On Friday, November 19, the day before the final game of the season, a monster mass-meeting was held in the chapel of the University of Minnesota. Seated in uniform on the platform were the members of the University of Minnesota football players and filling the hall were the University of Minnesota students. As the exercises were opened with the rousing "Ski-U-Mah", for which the Gopher school is justly famous, a big sign bearing the words, "Western Champions" in letters a foot high was hoisted above the blushing players on the platform. As President Northrop put it, the opinion of the students and alumni of the university was that the next day would see the realization of their fondest dreams, a team coached by Fielding H. Yost, humbled by the wearers of the Gold and Maroon.

To be pitted against a team that had won by almost annihilating scores, was the Michigan team which had been playing erratic football all season. Winning one game by a close score, the Wolverines had braced and scored at will the following Saturday. This had been the program followed during the first four weeks of the season. Then had come a defeat, and from a quarter where it was entirely unexpected. Following that defeat the team was forced to make a trip to Philadelphia, return to Ann Arbor and go on almost immediately to Minneapolis, to play the confident and victorious team of the University of Minnesota. It was small wonder that under the circumstances the supporters of the Minnesota team expressed every confidence in Dr. Williams and his husky squad, and showed that confidence with every cent they had.

It was a rather blue crowd of football men who reached Minneapolis from Ann Arbor on Wednesday morning. The weather was cold and there was nearly a foot of snow on the ground. A small number of Alumni met the team and coaches at the station and took them in automobiles to their hotel. A good luncheon and a brisk practice on the tan-bark in the Hippodrome did much to restore the spirits of the team but the exhilaration did not last long and in the evening it was a very good joke indeed that could bring more than the faintest smile from any of the team. This state of mingled pleasure and despondency lasted until Friday noon. The members of the team were just beginning a light luncheon when there was a commotion in the lobby of the hotel and suddenly the strains of the "Victors" went ringing through the halls. From that moment the spirit of the members of the team changed. There was never an instant but what they knew that victory was to be theirs on the morrow.

The weather on the day of the game was bright and not too warm. The field which had been protected from the snow by a heavy covering of straw was somewhat soft but fast work was not impossible. The crowd was not as large as it had been two weeks previous when Minnesota had defeated Chicago, but there was more suppressed excitement as, beginning Saturday morning, even the news that Captain

McGovern was going to play for Minnesota did not quiet the rumor that Michigan was going to spring a big surprise on that day.

Confidence was restored to the Gophers almost immediately for three minutes after Michigan had kicked off and the ball was far in Michigan's territory, Captain McGovern dropped back to the 18-yard line, almost directly in front of the goal posts, prepared to put over the bar one of his famous drop-kicks. The ball sailed back to the Minnesota captain, a perfect throw from the center, but the kick was a failure, the ball flying low and far to one side of the goal posts. Then Michigan had its first chance in attacking the Minnesota defense and then the wearers of the Maroon and Gold sat up in amazement. The weaklings that the Gophers thought they were playing proved to be giants and the mighty defense of the Minnesota team was battered and broken by the short, sharp plunges of the Michigan backs. It was a series of short bucks varied by two 15-yard runs that put the ball in Michigan's possession on the Minnesota 2-yard line. Once the Minnesota line held, then it yielded slightly and the ball was advanced a yard. Captain Allerdice was called to carry the ball the remaining distance and when the mass had lifted it was found that the ball rested a good foot beyond the final line. An instant later a goal was kicked and Minnesota was forced to fight against a six-point lead.

The Gophers proved to be good fighters for they tied the score before the half was ended. It was a forward pass that enabled Michigan to make its first touchdown against Pennsylvania, and it was a forward pass that allowed Minnesota's only score against Michigan. Securing the ball in the middle of the field the Gophers worked it down to the 8-yard line. They had one more yard to go to get a first down and Captain McGovern started to carry the ball around right end. He ran a few steps then turned and shot the ball to Tackle Walker who was standing far to the left on the 2-yard line, alone and unguarded. It was an easy matter for him to catch the ball and trot the little distance that remained, Minnesota kicking the goal that was necessary to tie the score. That was an end to the scoring in the first half.

Digitized by Google

Michigan was expected to weaken during the second half. Instead of weakening they seemed to grow stronger and in short order the ball was worked into Minnesota territory. Captain Allerdice tried a place kick and failed, the Gophers then getting the ball on their 25-yard line. On the first play a forward pass was attempted, McGovern throwing the ball toward Rademacher. However Minnesota had not figured on Magidsohn being in the way. Instead of running backward or standing on his head, the Michigan halfback gauged the height of the ball and with a running leap grabbed it and ran unceremoniously the thirty-five yards that were necessary for a touchdown. Allerdice did not fail to kick the goal. Some minutes later the ball was again in Minnesota's territory. Pattengill took a free-catch on the 42-yard line and Captain Allerdice scored the final three points for the Wolverines by booting the ball squarely between the goal posts.

Michigan's victory was due in large measure to the lesson the team learned against Notre Dame and because the Minnesota team failed to vary its defense to meet Michigan's unexpected attack. According to the plan that was figured out at Minnesota before the game, Michigan was to use the forward pass continually. They had won the game against Pennsylvania by its use and would naturally do the same thing against the Gophers. A beautiful plan of defense was formulated to break up these forward passes and the plan was very effectively executed the only two times that Michigan attempted that play. The secondary defense was drawn backward and far to the side, leaving the primary defense alone to hold Michigan's line attack. It was fully expected that this could be done as the line-men, from tackle to tackle, had not met their equal during the year. The Michigan line proved to be much stronger than was expected and opened holes easily, through which the Wolverine backs plunged for good distances.

The Gophers recognized the fact that Michigan had won because she had the better team and the Wolverines gave Minnesota credit for having played a hard, clean game. At the banquet after the game the members of both teams mingled freely and it would have been hard for one not familiar with the players to pick the Michigan men from their Minnesota friends.

The Big White Jug

MICHIGAN again has possession of the big stone water jug that did service through the grilling season of 1903. After the clash with Minnesota in that year the jug mysteriously disappeared and was not recovered until Wolverine and Gopher did battle in 1909.

This is how it happened, as explained by Coach Williams of Minnesota after the final game on last season's schedule:

"The Michiganders had made much of the jug during that season of 1903. It went everywhere with them and the perspiring warriors of the gridiron drank from its heavy mouth during every contest on the schedule. After each game the score was emblazoned on the side of the jug.

"Well, when Michigan journeyed to Minneapolis for the wind-up of the season, the Gophers plotted against the water jug. It will be remembered that the famous game lasted until darkness had fallen. When the water boy looked for the jug after the piping of the timekeepers' whistles had called the men from the field, he failed to find it. "Cap." Redden and his men wondered and worried over the loss. But it did them no good. The disappearance of the jug remained a mystery."

But after the maize and blue had stamped the maroon and gold into the mud of Northrop Field on the twentieth of November, 1909, Coach Williams experienced a change of heart. He confessed that his men had wilfully stolen the jug. Then he produced it and below the record of 1903 was painted the score of the Michigan-Minnesota game that ended with Michigan on the long end of a 15 to 6 score.

"We're giving it back," said the Gopher coach, "with the understanding that we can have it again should we win from you next year. If you win you keep it."

The jug was brought back to Ann Arbor and now has a niche all of its own in the trophy room at Waterman Gymnasium.

Champions of the West

RAGGING Michigan from the lower rounds of the ladder of football fame, where three years of sad reverses had left her, and placing her again upon the lofty pinnacle of success, such was the 1909 football season. It will go down in the annals of the Wolverines as one of the greatest seasons since Fielding H. Yost commenced to teach the Michiganders the gentle gridiron sport and the art of humbling the west.

With the aid of the mighty pigskin warriors of whose prowess Michigan men will never tire of speaking, Yost humbled the west for many years. Coach after coach and team after team met their fate when they tackled the wizard of the gridiron and his moleskin heroes. The west produced some magnificent coaches and even more magnificent teams, but Yost and Michigan were just a little better and the Wolverines gathered all the honors and joys which are an accompaniment of great victories. The name Michigan was a talisman in the west. Even the east, usually speaking of the west only in terms of disdain, rubbed its eyes and began to take notice. It was Michigan everywhere and Michigan could never be foiled, try as hard as the rival colleges would.

When the cup seemed filled to overflowing the tide suddenly changed. Without warning came the crash and Michigan toppled from her lofty position as western champions, and the colleges which had long borne the brunt of the Wolverine onslaughts laughed with glee. At last the mighty, the invincible Michigan, had dropped. Even as the years of plenty were followed by the same number of lean or famine years in ancient Egypt, so were three years of success sullied by three seasons during which time the Maize and Blue suffered constant defeat at the hands of her greatest rivals and for that matter the greatest team in the country, Pennsylvania. The hard earned laurels wilted one by one when staggering defeats overshadowed the deeds of the past. The past was forgotten in the sorrow of the present and Michigan was for a time the source of jest and laughter from the large western institutions, who no longer feared her and who no longer played her.

But the wheel of fortune was not destined to stop when Michigan was in the slough of despair. The three lean years in turn were crowned by a wonderful season in which both east and west groveled before the victorious Wolverine and the faded laurels again became as fresh as in the past. By contrast with the preceding years the past season appeared more brilliant than had it followed six years of constant success. The Wolverines had tasted the fruit of the tree of bitterness and the laurel was again sweet to the eye and taste.

"Dave" Allerdice, Capt.

Like the downfall, success was sudden and almost unexpected. The opening of the season gave little promise of what was to come. "Hurry-up" Yost had little material of a stellar quality to work with. The men who remained from the previous year appeared hardly more than ordinary players. The best men had graduated and among the newcomers appeared no wonders to step into their shoes. The rival colleges on the other hand had excellent prospects and did not fear the Wolverines much. Most of their prestige had been shorn off by previous defeats and success appeared only as a hazy mirage on the distant horizon.

Yost never faltered. Weeks of gruelling practice mixed with a fair amount of hard luck, football luck, let us say, finally resulted in the formation of a champion eleven from a group of men who under any other coach would probably have never risen above mediocrity. At the same time that he was instilling the principles and the fine arts of the gridiron game into the men, he filled them with a feeling of confidence which helped later on. His old time talks, which were largely responsible for previous championships, served their former purpose of instilling "ginger" and self-confidence. Short, concise, but straight from the shoulder, they had the same effect upon the Michiganders that the Napoleonic speeches must have had upon those wonderful warriors of the first empire.

He moulded an eleven, whose prowess startled the country, from men whom numerous critics spoke of as "dubs" early in the season, and whose praises they could not laud enough after Minnesota had finally been humbled, after a meteoric season in the west.

Giving Fielding H. Yost all due credit, and he deserves most of it, extending to Keene Fitzpatrick praise for his share in the wonderful work, and not forgetting Curtiss Redden or the other men who assisted in the work, yet it was essentially Michigan spirit and confidence that enabled the Maize and Blue to be placed above the proud colors of the greatest institutions in the country. It was the wonderful quality of "we CAN do it and we WILL do it" which filled the men and which enabled them to sweep over Syracuse, Pennsylvania and Minnesota.

The opening of the year was anything but auspicious. Playing loose and ragged football, which did not show even flashes of championship form, Michigan scarcely defeated the Case School of Applied Sciences in the opening game. The men of Yost could not cross the Ohio goal line and only Allerdice's timely goal from placement saved the day for the Maize and Blue. A great change was noticed, however, in the second game. Coach Hernstein brought a fair team from Ohio State to do battle with the Wolverines but this turned out to be a veritable slaughter of the innocents for the Buckeye eleven left Ann Arbor after a score of 33 points had been tallied against it and its only touchdown was made through a strange freak of fortune.

The grade was not to be easy, however, for in the succeeding week the Marquette eleven, representing the Jesuit college of Milwaukee, fairly played the Wolverines to a standstill. Each side scored a touchdown and Allerdice's goal from touchdown decided the day. It appeared as if the Wolverines were playing in streaks and away from their usual speed, for Syracuse was the next victim and before the end of that game the scorers were tired of keeping tally of the points the Wolverines gained. The total was 44, but this hardly represents the manner in which Syracuse was handled. The year before the Methodists had handed out a crushing defeat to a crippled Wolverine eleven and the westerners were thirsting for revenge. They took a dreadful toll for their failure to better the easterners before, and Syracuse suffered defeat during the rest of the season. It took the hearts out of "Tad" Jones' boys and out of "Tad" Jones also, as many will recollect.

Scarcely had the rooters ceased rejoicing over this victory when Frank Longman brought eleven men from Notre Dame to Ferry Field. The Wolverines were suffering their usual semi-monthly slump and the scrappy Catholics caught them off their guard. To be frank, Michigan was greatly outplayed, and when Notre Dame left there were many who cheered because the score was not larger.

With this defeat it seemed as if the chances of winning either of the remaining games was about as great as that of the proverbial snow ball existing in the regions beyond old Charon's ferry. Nevertheless, the old Michigan spirit was never more in evidence than the evening the team left for the city of brotherly love. The men themselves were determined but not over-confident. The result is too well known to call for explanation and let it suffice to say that never was victory more unexpected and at the same time more welcome. Pennsy had a fair claim to one of the strongest teams east of the Alleghenies and not even the most hostile critic could deny the Wolverine his share of the fruits of victory. Even then there appeared to be little hope of humbling Minnesota, for the Gophers had gone through such a season of brilliant success that even the Pennsylvania victory appeared to lose some of its brilliancy when compared to the work of Dr. Williams' eleven men.

Again the unexpected happened and the proud "Gopher bit the dust" when he encountered the men of Yost. Several shifts had to be made for this contest, as "Billy" Wasmund had played his last game for Michigan against the Quakers, and a new quarterback had to be secured. James Joy Miller was the man and his wonderful generalship and spectacular playing assisted in giving the victory to Michigan. The east and the west were humbled and Michigan again held the western Championship.

To Captain Allerdice, "Silent Dave," much of the credit is due for the victorious team that was Michigan's. Not only was he easily the best punter and place kicker in the west but he had a habit of being on the spot to tackle the man with the ball which was disconcerting to the opponents. With Magidsohn to help him advance the ball and with Clarke, Freeney and Lawton ready to take any place in the backfield that they were asked, Michigan possessed men behind the line who could be expected to do things and do them rightly. In the line Captain-elect Benbrook was the main tower of strength but he was nobly assisted by Smith, Ranney, Conklin, Casey, Edmunds, Wells, Watkins and Pattengill.

But with all the praise that can and must be given to the men who made up the regular team, to their coach and trainers, one important part of this year's football squad is deserving of more than a word of mention. Those men who played so brilliantly against Pennsylvania and Minnesota would have been like infants; that team work which startled east and west would not have been possible had it not been for the untiring work of the men who won the "R." Without expecting praise and with little reward in sight they cheerfully worked night after night as buffers for the regular machine. Truly it is to the reserves that a large share of the praise for the winning of the title "Champions of the West" must be given.

The All-Freshmen Team

COACH DOUGLASS

FOR the first time since the fall of 1905 Michigan offered to the football enthusiasts from the freshman class a coach and an outside schedule. To say that the youngsters showed interest in the "All-Freshmen Team" would be superfluous. Suffice it to say that Coach Douglass had a half hundred promising players to work with and that they stuck the season out, developing a team that was of superior quality.

This freshman team supplied a need that has been pressing since the Regents abolished the custom of granting the first year men a schedule of their own. But little was offered the would-be gridiron hero in those three years of freshman inactivity. True, he could play upon the scrubs, but that means little aside from hard work. In his second year, if he were diligent and lucky in the class room, he might try out for the 'varsity. These conditions were not tempting to the preparatory school boy who was expecting to enter college, and, beyond a doubt, they lost many strong athletes for Michigan. The success of the 1913 eleven will have its effect, and the promise of honor to the freshman who has football ability will draw good men toward Ann Arbor.

The Freshmen met five opponents and scored five victories. Only twice were they scored upon. One contesting eleven negotiated a goal from placement and another scored a safety, when a wild pass sent the ball behind the Michiganders' own goal.

The clash with Ohio Northern was the first game on the freshman schedule. Douglass had had his men out only a week, but he journeyed down to Ada; hustled his players directly from train to gridiron and watched the youngsters humble the "Buckeyes" with a 19 to 0 score.

The next game was played against the Michigan School for the Deaf eleven at Ann Arbor. Some of the older men around the campus can remember the days when the deaf boys were worthy opponents for the freshmen, but their team of 1909 did not rank with the 1913 aggregation. The score 23 to 0 does not tell the story, for Ferry Field was slippery and luck was with the Flint men.

On the following Saturday the first year players received the only scare of the season. They met the M. A. C. Freshmen at Lansing and the "Aggies" held their opponents to a 6 to 3 score. Several Michigan Freshmen had received minor injuries during the week and were in no condition to play. Also, luck was with the Lansing squad. Time after time the Freshmen from Michigan marched straight down to the goal line and then fumbled. Huebel's lusty toe saved the day by booting the ball from placement twice. One kick was from the thirty-five-yard line, and the other five yards nearer the objective goal.

Alma played the freshmen on Ferry Field while the 'varsity was trouncing Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. The score was 23 to 0 and the game belonged to the Michigan boys from the first whistle.

The schedule closed on November 20th, with a game against Albion. 32 to 2 was the score, and the Methodists would never have scored had it not been for a wild pass.

All these games had their spectacular features. "Bottles" Thomson at full back played a remarkable game. Speed is his principal asset and few of the men who tried out for the back field positions could run off the plays rapidly enough for him.

Hubel, at left half back, climbed up onto a little pedestal all of his own by kicking goals from placement. The boy's performing was little short of wonderful at times. In the Albion game he booted the oval from the visitors' 51-yard line for a beautiful goal—something that was not equalled by any kicker in western football last season.

Seeley's performance during the season was peculiar in a way. The boy worked at right half back. Early in the fall he was playing a good consistent game but not exceptional. Then came hard luck, minor injuries, and he remained on the side lines for a time. In the wind-up, however, he played the entire game and displayed a brand of football that is seldom equalled by first year men. His line plunging and end runs were sensational, while his defensive work was faultless.

Cole, at right tackle; Haff, at end; Clark at the other extremity of the line, and McDonald at center, all played stellar football.

Douglass drilled his men in the open style of play. The forward pass predominated in their attack. Many of the men came here from schools where football is taught by competent coaches. and this fact gave "Doug" a splendid basis upon which to work. The freshmen took readily to Yost football, working the long pass and on-side kick for repeated long gains.

Defensively, the 1913 eleven was a surprise. None of their opponents were able to gain consistently. The line held like a wall and the ends tackled with a combined certainty and viciousness that foiled attempts to gain by wide runs. An instance ofthis stone wall defense was furnished in the Albion game, when the Methodists had worked the leather to within one yard of their objective goal. They went no farther. The line refused to yield and, on the other hand, threw the Albion backs for losses.

This freshman team is a great training school for the 'varsity. The men receive more individual attention than they possibly could obtain on the reserves, and it is probable that several who played through the five-game schedule last fall will land on the 'varsity squad when football time rolls 'round again. The following men were awarded the "All-Fresh." numerals:

Daniels, Donald, Quinn, McDonald, Cornwell, Cole, Haff, McMillan, Seeley, Huebel, Thomson, Clark, Fischer, Hancock and Picard.

Review of the Season

THE record of the baseball nine of 1908 was the one bright spot in a Michigan season which was marked by unusual disasters on the field and gridiron, and the season of 1909 came as a promise of better things—a harbinger of a general reversal of form throughout, which would place Michigan where it should be—"Champions of the West." There was nothing halfway about the promise that the baseball squad was responsible for winning eighteen clear-cut victories out of twenty-two games, losing three and tying one. And this, despite the fact that the squad played the hardest schedule on record. So emphatically did the Maize and Blue representatives demonstrate their superiority in the south, in the east, and at home that they ended the season with a total of 140 points against 59.

Necessarily it was a season marked by "pep." That pastmaster of the gentle art of injecting gingery go-fast into players and rooters alike, "Sully" Sullivan, had retained the captainship, in which post he had proven his efficiency in the preceding year. It was no doubt due to his enthusiasm and stimulating methods that when Coach Lew McAllister, who had been largely responsible for so much of Michigan's success on the diamond, issued the first general call, he was overwhelmed by a record number of candidates reporting. Though the experience of some of the aspirants was limited to playing one-old-cat on the village green, they all possessed the willingness to work and consequently the gym cage was taxed to its capacity. It was possible, therefore, when desirable spring weather made it advisable to get out into the open air, to select about thirty men, from whom a nine of victors might be developed. Ineligibility rules and class room demands made it impossible for some of the former stars to appear, but after the necessary elimination by tryouts, the squad contained exceptionally good talent.

The annual invasion of the south, which serves the double purpose of giving the men valuable spring training and bringing the representative universities of the two sections together, opened most auspiciously, Kentucky State yielding to Michigan by a score of 10 to 0. One by one the legions of the south surrendered—only Tennessee, after losing by 16 to 1 holding the Wolverines, who suffered a reversal of form and also an attack of overconfidence, to a tie. After leaving the sunny south and its agreeable warmness, the Maize and Blue warriors encountered not only Notre Dame but a snowstorm as well and consequently the first and only decisive defeat of the season was registered against them, a defeat which later in the season was effectually wiped out by two victories.

Penn State next humbled the Yellow and Blue but the hardest game to lose was one in which, after twice accepting defeat, the Syracuse players triumphed by the score of 2 to 1. It was the third appearance of Dean in the pitching box in his initial season and the youngster made the notable record of allowing but one hit during the entire game. Through a costly misjudgment on his part, however, the game was lost. While regrettable, it could not detract much from his feat, which is seldom recorded in collegiate baseball.

Michigan's pitching staff was one of the most effective means of preventing opponents tallying. In the three games in which Dean participated, he allowed but eight hits and struck out 15 men. Blanding also proved his consistency in the puzzling line by causing no less than 64 men to fan the atmosphere in 13 games while Barr in 11 games proved a mystery to 54 batters. Incomplete records available make it impossible to give the number of hits that each man allowed, but they were comparatively few.

Michigan batters did not permit opposing pitchers to make such records as far as they were concerned. Whatever may have been the faults of the Wolverines, stickwork and base-running were not among them. But few summaries of games fail to record that Michigan batters lined out the sphere for two and three bag hits, while no less than four members are credited with home runs. "Chick" Lathers heads the roll of honor in the batting line with a percentage of .383, while "Rabbitt" Fountain is second with .375. Though Hill is seventh in the list, his ability to send the ball far enough to permit two and three base hits made him conspicuous with the stick. The batting averages are as follows:

	AB	R	H	BB	SH	PC
Lathers	94	17	36	5	2	.383
Fountain	80	15	30	8	6	.375
Dean	12	1	4	1	6	.333
Lothrop	70	13	23	8	4	.328
Barr	31	4	10	0	0	.323
Hill	52	9	15	3	2	.288
Enzenroth	75	10	20	2	2	.266
Olson	83	13	22	8	4	.265
Sullivan	79	25	20	21	3	.253
Blanding	48	10	11	3	3	.223
Dunne	39	6	8	2	6	.205
Snow	43	5	6	1	4	.139

Though baseball fans regard with keen regret the fact that Coach Lew McAllister will not continue to direct the squad for the present season and consider with some dismay the ineligibility of some of the most promising embryo material, and also a few of the veterans, they firmly believe that the handicaps will be met and the nine of 1910 will maintain the excellent baseball record of the University of Michigan, so firmly established during the past few years.

Track Season of 1909

WITH the coming of the spring of 1909 the period of adversity which had beset Michigan's athletic teams since the rupture with the Conference seemed to have disappeared. True, the track team of 1907 with Rowe, Coe, Garrels, Heath, Ramey and the others who starred in the olden days surprised the east by taking second place in the Intercollegiate meet at Cambridge, but in other branches of athletics the Maize and Blue suffered heavy defeat. In 1908 the Wolverine track team, with only a remnant of the old guard, sank from a place near the top to one near the bottom in the annual eastern meet.

In the following year, however, the year of 1909, some of the former prestige which the Wolverines had enjoyed was regained, Michigan scoring 14 points and finishing fifth in the great track meet at Cambridge. In a Conference meet Michigan rooters would have been filled with rage if it were necessary to be content with such a place but battling against the strong teams that the eastern institutions have produced, with a team practically untrained in track competition, the securing of that place brought joy to the hearts of the Wolverines.

The track season of 1909 opened auspiciously. The material seemed plentiful and of good quality. The class of 1911 was one of the most fertile in the production of athletes that has entered the university in some time and from that class came the point winners in the meets, both preliminary and the big one which followed.

Only one blot marred a track season which otherwise was highly successful. This was in the annual Pennsylvania relay carnival. Michigan went east to win for the seventh time the banner in the four-mile relay and for the first time sent a team to compete in the one-mile relay. With Captain Dull, West, May and Bohnsack as the members of the four mile squad there seemed hardly a doubt that Michigan would be successful in the longer race and with Keck, Leger, Craig and Gamble to run the shorter race it seemed probable that victory would also rest with the Wolverines in that event. The result is too well known to need much comment. Captain Dull, the last runner of the four men in the longer race was given a lead of 40 yards over Paull of Penn., the final man on the Quaker team. The worry of the day and the fear that the other members of the team would fail proved too much for the doughty little Wolverine leader and he ran one of the poorest races that he ever ran before or since. Against him was one of the best milers in the country and the combination of these two circumstances proved the undoing of the Wolverines. Paull had passed Dull before the first lap was ended and by the end of the race was leading by a wide margin. In the one-mile race, Keck, the last runner for Michigan, was also given a slight lead, but inexperience proved his undoing. He ran himself out in the first 220 yards of his race and although he was leading by ten yards only a hundred yards from the finish he was unable to produce the necessary strength to allow him to finish in front, Chicago winning with Michigan second and Illinois third.

Michigan scored all her points in the Eastern Intercollegiate meet without winning a first. The point winners in the meet were Craig, who took second in the 100-yard dash; Leger, third in the 440-yard dash; Horner, third in the shot-put; Dull, second in the two mile and fourth in the mile; Towar, third in the mile and West, fourth in the two mile.

In the mile race, Paull, Dull's opponent at Philadelphia, set a new record by running the distance in 4:17 3-5, while Taylor, of Cornell, set a new record in the two-mile, lowering Rowe of Michigan's record by seven seconds. Taylor's time was 9:27 3-5. Even at that Captain Dull, of Michigan, ran a magnificent race in the two-mile, finishing but three yards behind Taylor. In the one-mile he was beaten out by Towar, of Michigan, who got third place, the Wolverine leader landing in fourth position.

Craig took second in the 100-yard dash, finishing but a yard behind Foster, of Harvard, the winner. The hurdle events in which Craig was also entered came too close after the dash to permit him to place. Leger, after his performance in the preliminaries of the day before was the favorite in the quarter-mile, but he broke just before reaching the tape and landed in third place. Horner secured third place in the shot-put with a put well over 45 feet. He was beaten by Little, of Harvard, and Kreuger, of Swarthmore.

The only preliminary meet with an outside school was with Ohio State University at Columbus, which Michigan won by a score of 98½ to 55½. In only three of the fourteen events was an Ohio man able to win a first place, although in the high jump, Lapp, of Ohio, did succeed in tying Page of Michigan. The weights found the Ohio team pitiably weak and this fact gave Horner a chance to show to advantage. He easily won first place in the shot-put, hammer throw and discus. Craig went Horner five better in the number of points won, securing twenty for his team by taking first in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and in both the high and low hurdles. Considering the condition of the track, which was exceedingly muddy, Towar's time in the mile, 4:37½, was good. In the two mile Captain Dull and West were hard forced by Captain Levering of Ohio, the two Michigan men finishing in front by a scant margin. Dull's time in this event was 9:57 1-5.

The brightest thing about the track season of 1909 was the fact that of the men who composed the track team in that year the majority would be back in school for the 1910 season. Captain Dull was the only one lost by graduation but since the opening of the present year West has left school. Following the meet at Cambridge Don. C. May was chosen to lead the Wolverines the following year and with him as a nucleus for the team of 1910, he will have Craig, Horner, Leger, Keck, Gamble, Bohnsack, Hall and Freeney. These men with the others who will naturally be developed from the sophomore class should worthily uphold the Maize and Blue against the east.

Varsity Tennis Team

J. H. Price . . . Captain

J. H. Price
Frank Ayers
P. A. Leidy
Morrison Shafroth

The Tennis Season of 1909 was successful for Michigan, both in the number of matches played and those in which Michigan was victorious. Shafroth, '10, won the Fall Tournament and was thereby placed on the team. Price, Ayers and Leidy were eligible and formed the team to take the Eastern trip.

On this trip Syracuse and Hamilton were beaten by clean scores. Union was then played, Michigan winning, 5 to 1. At Ithaca Cornell was the winner by a score of 5 to 1. This score does not show the relative strength of the teams, however. Michigan had been playing on good courts at home and at every stop they made on the trip. At Cornell there had been no preparation made for the coming of the Michigan team and no courts were reserved. As all of the courts were in use by the tennis players of the University the tournament was delayed until one of the courts was vacant. It was the poorest court on the field, being very rough and partly covered with grass.

Later at Lansing, Michigan Agricultural College was defeated 3 to 1.

For the season of 1910, Price, Ayers and Shafroth are eligible and a successful season is looked for. Ayers, '10L, was elected to succeed Captain Price of last year's team.

Keene Fitzpatrick

THE standing of a university in the athletic world is conditioned upon so many and such complicated prerequisites that it would be an exaggeration to say that any one individual is responsible for the university's prestige. But if one thing is more essential than another in the attainment of athletic victories it is the possession of a good trainer. And so it is that Michigan's successes in recent years, on the gridiron, on the track and on the diamond, have been due in large measure to the services of Keene Fitzpatrick.

And now Michigan's great little trainer is going to leave. He is going to Princeton. But his memories will linger in Ann Arbor for long years to come.

For many years past Keene has trained the Track, Baseball and Football teams; and during that time he has sent men to victories that would have caused severe attacks of "magnum caput" to most trainers. But never a word of boast or pride have we heard from Keene. He takes little credit to himself, although much is due; but he says little and "saws wood." Stagg of Chicago and Murphy of Pennsylvania have been classed with Fitzpatrick as the greatest trainers in the country, but in our opinion Keene is in a class by himself, and head and shoulders above these competitors when it comes to real ability as a trainer.

In the track world the names of Garrels, Ramey, Snow, Dull, Coe, Hahn, Nufer and Horner are in the first rank; and all of these men have been proteges of Fitzpatrick. He has trained and developed them—carefully, patiently, wisely and scientifically—sending them to wonderful victories. For seven consecutive years, too, Keene's men won the four-mile relay race at the Pennsylvania relay carnival —an achievement possible only to training of the highest order. In the Football world the victories of Michigan from 1901–1905 shine particularly bright, as the greatest successes in the history of the pig-skin. And the teams that won those victories were under the training of Fitzpatrick. It is sufficient for his lasting reputation to say that in those four years Michigan was forced to make only one substitution in the line-up during the game on account of the condition of the player. And last Fall the victories over Pennsylvania and Minnesota stamped Michigan's trainer as the greatest in the business. His perfection in the art of training was shown by the condition of the Michiganders when on November 13 twelve of them beat nineteen Quakers under a Summer sun with the thermometer around seventy, and the next Saturday, November 20, after jumping half way across the continent, whipped Minnesota on a freezing day, and finished the game with no ill effects.

But aside from any professional services, Fitzpatrick has contributed much to the University in other ways. He has exerted a salutary influence for "clean athletics." He has improved Michigan spirit among the student body. And enjoying as he does the confidence of the faculty he has been able to secure many concessions from the administration in behalf of athletics.

Digitized by Google

Because Keene is a great trainer and consequently an invaluable asset in developing teams; because his indirect influence on athletics flowing from his relations with the faculty is a large benefit; because we like him as a neighbor and a man, we regret sincerely that he is going to leave Michigan. We shall miss him in many ways; and we shall find it hard to fill his shoes when he is gone. Not to see him squatting on the side lines at the games will bring regret to the hearts of all the Wolverines; and the yell-master will feel that one of the most willingly-given cheers is unavailable in that he can not call for "nine rahs for Fitzpatrick."

We repeat, Keene, we hate to see you go. We would like to keep you here at Michigan. You have served us well, and we feel a sincere gratitude for your loyalty and hard work. As you leave, we wish you God-speed. May you like Princeton as well as we are sure Princeton will like you. May fortune attend you to the end of your days.

C. B. F.

Fielding H. Yost

Quiet and reserved, yet a veritable dynamo of unconquerable energy, such is Fielding H. Yost, today the greatest football coach in America. He has rivals in the east and west who would be prone to deny him the right to this title, but they are in the minority and do not count. Not only Michigan but practically the entire football world holds the Wolverine leader as head and shoulders above them all.

Not since the time he came from the west, with some good players in his wake and startled the country by trouncing the west so badly that it took it four years to recover, has the "hurry-up" man been more popular than at present. The undergraduates, who came here since the days of Yost's great successes, have fallen in line with the alumni who look upon Yost as something almost demonical as far as football is concerned.

Before the opening of the eventful 1909 season, Yost declared that his retirement would take place at the end of the year. Charles Baird had resigned, Yost was going, and there were rumors that Trainer Fitzpatrick would also leave. It looked as if the breaking up of the old triumvirate would mean the fading of Michigan athletic glory. Torn by conflicting ideas, his desire to give all of his time to business and his great love for the gridiron game, Yost was unable to make up his mind at the end of the season. But the powers that be, realizing the true value of this wonderful man, held forth such tempting inducements that the "hurry-up" man signed another contract.

Napoleon spoke to the French army before the Pyramids and Austerlitz, and two wonderful victories followed; Yost spoke to eleven determined men in his own peculiar way before the Pennsy and Minnesota games and the football world was startled. The effect was instantaneous. Critics in every town and city hailed him—the Napoleon of football.

Philip G. Bartelme

Director of Outdoor Athletics

With the appointment of Philip C. Bartelme to the directorship of Michigan athletics was ended the conjecture which followed the announcement that Director Baird would resign. The action of the Board of Regents allayed all fear that the management of our athletics would fall into unsafe hands. Much as the retirement of Director Baird was regretted, the loss is partly forgotten in the acquisition of the services of such a man as Mr. Bartelme.

Besides possessing remarkable business ability, Mr. Bartelme has been actively connected with Michigan Athletics since the time when he was a student in the University, and he is accordingly well qualified to fill the vacancy. The first season of his directorship is almost over and it has been entirely satisfactory. He has shown his ability to perform the duties connected with the office. With all his ability, however, he would be powerless without the support of the student body. This he has and the sentiment of the students of the University is that expressed by the Directors of the Athletic Association when they wired Mr. Bartelme upon learning of his appointment: "You can depend upon our fullest co-operation in the performance of your new duties."

Director Bartelme attended the University of Michigan in former years but is not a graduate of this institution. At the time of his accepting his present position he was a member of a banking firm in Chicago.

ANNUAL FALL RACE

The annual fall race was held as a tryout for the Cross Country team and Novice Race combined. It was held over the new course which is about seven miles long. It passes out Washtenaw beyond the Poor House, thence across to Packard Street, back Packard Street to East University and then to the Gymnasium. The entrants finished in the following order: May, Saxton, McLaughlin, Hannevan, Willits, Spangler, Otte and Crossman. Time, 37:10. As Hannevan was ineligible he did not make the team, Crossman taking the place. Beardsley, who had been expected to make the team, was not in good condition and so failed to make the team. His showing in practice has been so good, however, that he was taken east.

Ed. Hannevan and Crossman were the two novices to win their C. C. C.

Inter-collegiate Cross Country Meet

Eight men were taken east to attend this meet. The seven wearing Michigan's colors who started were May, Willits, McLaughlin, Saxton, Beardsley, Spangler and Otte. They finished in the order named. The distance was six miles 100 yards, and was run over the Massachusetts Institute of Technology course, just outside of Boston.

Colleges entered and order of finish:

	Place	Points
Cornell	1	22
M. I. T.	2	88
Michigan	3	112
Yale	4	114
Dartmouth	5	123
Syracuse	6	143
Harvard	7	154
Pennsylvania	8	183
Columbia	9	232
Princeton	10	234

The Michigan team was composed almost entirely of green men, May and Saxton being only two men with any previous experience. The team made a remarkable showing, everything considered, and surprised everyone in the East. Pennsylvania, who had been picked for second, finished eighth.

For this year Michigan has Captain-elect Willits, Spangler, McLaughlin, Otte, Crossman and Beardsley still eligible and several promising new men.

Women's Recreation Field

WOMEN of the University of Michigan are dreamers, but dreamers of the sort that are making this great educational institution greater. Their dreams are not the airy musings of a poet but the visions of an individual who does things. Thirteen years ago these women dreamed of a building devoted to their social and physical needs. Barbour gymnasium was the realization. A much needed campus building encroached upon their only outdoor athletic grounds. the tennis courts, and they dreamed of a recreation field, ideal in its location, equipment and opportunity for development. This year Palmer Field, free from debt and with every possibility of being converted into adequate grounds becomes a fact. Now these women are straining their eyes for a glimpse of residential halls in the near future and with a fund already started; the promise of desirable sites from the board of regents; university alumnae rallying to the support of the plan and a ten months' campaign over the United States ready to be inaugurated, who can gainsay the probability of this dream being realized almost before another year book leaves the press.

When through the generosity of Hon. Peter White, expressed in a gift of $1500, the women were able to make a payment on the six and a half acres familiarly known as "Sleepy Hollow," the wiseacres shook their heads over the possibility of raising the other necessary five thousand. But they reckoned without the perse--verance and energy of the girls, whose efforts in various ways combined with liberal gifts, notably one of three thousand dollars from Senator T. W. Palmer, of Detroit, made it possible last fall to turn over to the regents the recreation field, free from debt. Since then there has been no relaxation of efforts and several lots have been added to the original purchase, the idea being to add in all, nine city lots, making a field of desirable size and shape.

While the extensive plans of landscape gardening prepared for the field have not been carried out as yet, three tennis courts, a basketball court and grounds for hockey and golf have been laid out while as soon as possible a swimmimg pool will be provided. Later opportunity for other sports will be afforded.

A temporary structure is now being used as a clubhouse but this is to be replaced with a rustic bungalow having a spacious porch, large lounging room, dining room alcove and kitchen on the first floor, while in the basement will be shower baths and lockers. The clubhouse will be built at an estimated cost of $7,000 and this with about $5,000 for purchasing the remaining lots and carrying on the desired improvements will give the women of the university a recreation field which will be a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Encouraged by the success which has crowned their efforts in securing Palmer field, the university women are turning their attention toward the erection of residential halls to meet one of the perplexing problems that now confronts the women students. The system in vogue at present has through its many disadvantages given rise to a demand for better housing arrangements, especially for the girls. The Woman's League has endeavored in a small way to meet the demand by means of renting houses and then filling them with members. The plan, though entirely new, has been successful and has found many enthusiastic supporters.

Efforts are now being made to raise sufficient funds to erect at least two residential halls this coming year and the work will be actively pushed in increasing the number until the demand is met. These halls will differ decidedly from dormitories. They will house between forty and seventy girls and will be under student control. They will be well built, excellently furnished and will cost between $40,000 and $70,000 each.

The advantages of such halls are obvious. The lower floor will be given over to suitable parlors, reading room and possibly a dining room. The latter feature will be dispensed with if a commons is secured for a dining hall. The girls will have a home life by the means of these halls and yet enjoy it from a student's standpoint.

One of the most forcible arguments for the establishment of the halls is the fact that their inauguration will aid decidedly in attracting a larger and stronger enrollment of women here. The increase of women students has not kept pace with that of the men and the above is believed to be one of the fundamental reasons for that condition.

The Student Council

IF the class of 1910 leaves no other heritage to the University of Michigan than the influence which its members have had in making the Student Council a real organization, not only with ideals but with the necessary spirit to make them positive factors, it will have served an excellent purpose. Conceived with an idea of acting as an instrument for student control of activities and conduct, in sympathy with the faculty and still distinctly representative of the students, the Student Council was founded upon worthy intentions. From the start the student body approved and stood ready to back up the council's moves and the faculty, without openly avowing its support, was in cordial agreement with the plan.

Despite these facts, the course taken by the council was insignificant and the organization soon degenerated into a campus joke. Its members instead of assuming authority, which would have been recognized at least by the students, attempted to defend their lack of activity and aggressiveness by asserting that they could do nothing as they possessed no official authority. Consequently the activity of the organization soon consisted chiefly of devising rules and selecting officials for underclass affairs.

Just why the entrance of 1910 men into the deliberations of the Student Council marked the beginning of a new and better era may be a matter of opinion, but there is no doubt as to the effect produced. This year the council has taken an active part in matters vital to the campus and while it has met rebuffs and defeats, it has proved that it can be made an organization competent to take hold of undergraduate matters and work out definite plans. Its members, feeling a sense of responsibility, have moved slowly in some cases but have demonstrated that when the matter is thoroughly sifted out, they are ready to act.

They have been instrumental in abolishing all "tickets" in campus politics. It is through the council's efforts that the men nominated to fill the various offices connected with undergraduate affairs have been elected by the good judgment of the voters and not by some political ring. The result is that student activities are in more competent hands and better results are being obtained.

The council has been censured by a few for their position in regard to the freshman-sophomore contests. Many advocate the old rough and tumble, go-as-you-please rushes and claim that the action of the council is not in accord with student sentiment. The position of the council is certainly a commendable one. The old form of rushes were becoming too dangerous. The faculty were opposed to them and it was time that a reaction should take place. Were it not for the Student Council the university today would be without any form of freshman-sophomore contest. The action of the Council in providing a substitute for the old traditional scraps saved to Michigan a remnant of the old form of contest.

The ability of the council was given a severe test this year by the Joy Miller case. The action of Joy, whereby he brought discredit upon Michigan's name in the athletic world, was generally condemned by the student body, yet it was not an easy thing, in the face of personal friendship and other influences, to conduct a rigid examination of the alleged offenses and to render an unbiased and decisive verdict in the case. The Student Council did its work unflinchingly and thoroughly. Every possible bit of evidence on both sides of the case was presented at the investigation, which was conducted in the form of a trial, and after careful deliberation the resolutions were drawn up. These resolutions formed the basis for the expulsion of Joy by the Engineering Faculty, a further testimonial of the co-operation between faculty and student council.

The Fresh-Soph Rush

"BLACK Friday", the day of the clash between the freshmen and the sophomore classes, made its advent this year, unheralded as formerly, by the glaring challenge of rival posters pasted to the loftiest and most conspicuous heights within reach of hands hurried by the fear of a sudden assault by the enemy from around the corner of a neighboring house or out of some dark shadow. No threats of awful punishment to be meted out by rival classes were flaunted from telegraph poles and the sides of buildings, for a single edict by the Student Council had stated that, "The posting of proclamations by under classmen is strictly prohibited."

Another feature attendant upon previous rushes was also lacking and that was the nightly rushes and scrimmaging and patrolling of the streets by bands of underclassmen carried on during the three or four days preceding the rush proper. There was no clandestine gathering of forces, no secret meetings and discussion of weighty plans for the overthrow of the enemy and the seizing of a stronghold such as the back yard of a hamburger shop, where a chosen band of fun makers and leaders of the Inquisition put the ever-changing line of prisoners through a series of vaudeville stunts with the aid of garlic, onions, antiquated eggs, and other instruments of torture. While to the few and extremely cautious and easily frightened freshmen this was a very commendable omission and contributed much to their happiness and peace of mind during the first few trying weeks of college life, yet it cannot but be that many a freshman bewailed the fact that he could not relate to an admiring circle at home thrilling tales of a sudden breaking into his room at midnight by a ruffian band, who gagged him or threatened his life if he should make an outcry or attempt to escape, then silently marched him bare-footed and thinly clad to the rendezvous, perchance the rear of a hamburger shop or some secluded vacant building, where they amused themselves and the ever-present crowd by making him give his high-school yell, sing the songs to the moon, yell for the class of the captors, eat garlic and onions in a race with some other unhappy victim, shampoo some one else and be shampooed in turn with eggs rejected by the hamburger man and finally end up by walking a plank, blind-folded, and finally falling into a waiting tank of icy mud and water, or being painted up like a circus clown and forced to do the duty of a dish washer or onion peeler for the benefit of the hamburger man. These preliminaries, very exciting to the participants and productive of great eagerness for the final day of reckoning, and interesting to the spectators who never fail to be on hand when news of a fray or a hazing party was noised about, were lacking because of another ruling against any hazing or class activity in this line before two o'clock of the day set for the rush.

As to the rush itself, for the first time, this year's underclass contest was held in the day time and occurred on South Ferry Field instead of on the Medic Green. The rush began at 2.30 in the afternoon and centered about three 26-foot poles placed thirty feet apart in a straight line. The middle pole bore at the top a large blue banner with a yellow "M", while to each of the other poles was nailed a banner bearing the numerals of the class defending it. The class which could capture the central banner and that of the opposing class, while successfully defending its own, was to be declared the winner. A time limit of thirty minutes was set for the accomplishment of this and to lend excitement to the contest and to increase the difficulty of reaching the banners, the poles were greased to a height of nine feet from the ground.

Before one o'clock of Friday afternoon, the loyal members of the two classes, clad in their war clothes and in tennis shoes, began to collect at the respective meeting places, the sophomores in front of Alumni Memorial Hall and the freshmen on North University Ave., near State St. The freshmen gathered in a noisy crowd, greatly outnumbering the sophomores, and proceeded to yell themselves into a fighting mood, giving mutual encouragement and advice as to the best method of attacking the secretly-feared enemy. The sophs also contributed their share to the noise and confusion, but with a little less bravado.

At 2 o'clock, the long line of underclassmen began to march to the field of battle, yelling defiance and keeping step to the tune of "Hail! Hail! The gang's all here!" Arrived at the field, the freshmen lined up thirty feet distant from the east pole with the 1913 banner at the top, which pole they were to defend. The much smaller band of sophomores massed themselves at an equal distance to the west of the pole bearing their banner. Crowded about the two bodies of underclassmen were the spectators, who, eager to see the struggle begin, anxious for the best vantage point, surged backward and forward and around. Meanwhile the freshmen and sophomores massed at opposite ends of the field of battle, held their councils of war and planned the assault.

At two-thirty o'clock, Dave Allerdice, the referee, gave the signal for hostilities to begin, and with wild yells the rival classes rushed to the poles, swarming about them in a frenzied attempt to gain the banners floating high above the ground. Each class stationed a band of its best men to defend its own banner and with the remainder tried to capture the other two banners. After an exciting ten-minute scramble with vain attempts to scale the slippery pole, one of the freshmen, climbing upon the heads and shoulders of the dense mass which surged about the middle pole, managed to get beyond the reach of the sophomores and pulled himself up past the slippery part of the pole and then climbed the remainder of the distance to the flag without much effort. There was a shout of triumph from the first year men upon the achievement of this victory. With one banner captured and with the confidence it gave them, the freshmen made a gallant assault against the small band of sophomores defending their own flag. Numbers won and within a few moments the second flag was in the possession of the freshmen.

As in former years the winning of the rush was merely a preliminary victory. The real rush began when the freshmen, proud of their achievement, scattered over the field yelling and singing. The sophomores profiting by the experience of the year before, organized themselves into squads and made every lone freshman they caught their victim. Not many escaped. The trees surrounding Ferry field were well filled and an empty box car upon the siding of the Ann Arbor Railroad made a temporary prison.

The rush was less spectacular than those of former years and good feeling prevailed throughout. The newspapers succeeded in making it a very exciting event and almost killed several participants on both sides.

The rush plays a peculiar part in the freshman's entrance into the University. There is a great amount of class spirit present in the underclassmen and it is certainly wise that it should not be quenched. The traditions of Michigan must be preserved and while it is unwise to continue forms of activity which are detrimental to the students and the University, by proper regulation the Fresh-Soph rush can remain and serve a good purpose.

There is no other means by which the freshmen can become so well acquainted and know the true strength of the fellows in their class. The friendly rubs with the sophomores widens their acquaintance and brings about many friendships which last not only through the four years of college life but on into the outside world.

Spring Contest 1909

FOR the second time the class of 1911 covered themselves with glory in the spring contests. As freshmen, the class won every point possible, and last year as sophomores they scored five points to their opponents' two.

As has been usual in the past few years the contests were held May Festival week. On the whole, where strength of numbers could win, the freshmen were victorious; but where the forces were even, and skill and good generalship were required, the sophomores proved themselves superior to the verdant ones.

The opening scene of the contests was on Friday, May 15, at the Huron River just below the dam. The event was the tug of war. A light and a heavy team from each class were to contest. This was an innovation, designed to give more underclassmen a chance to compete and to furnish more excitement for the spectators.

The light-weight teams were the first to pull. The freshmen had the poor side of the river—the fatal south bank, which, as tradition had it, had never seen a tug of war won—and they lost. Within less than four minutes after Allerdice fired the starting gun, the anchor man was dragged into the chilly Huron.

Immediately the rope was stretched again, and the heavy-weight contest was begun. This time the sophomores were to have the south bank. For a moment neither side budged. Then a man with a megaphone stepped out and began to talk to the sophomores. "Keep low and watch me," he said, as he swung his arms slowly, like a cheer leader. The sixty big men of 1911 began to sway with him, and soon the jerks counted. Inch by inch the freshmen were pulled in. All traditions had been broken—the south bank had won.

In the evening the scene shifted to Sleepy Hollow, where the bag fight was to be held. As soon as the classes lined up it was seen that the freshmen greatly outnumbered their opponents. The intense fight which followed ended with the score twenty-four to five in favor of the freshmen. The contest was picturesque, 5,000 spectators lining the slopes. The score at the end of the first day was three points for the sophomores and one for the freshmen.

The next day the crowds gathered at Ferry Field to witness the relay obstacle races. The best runners of each class were pitted against each other. The race was to go to the class winning two heats out of three. The first year men started off with a rush, and easily won the first by a fifty-yard lead. The second was as easy for the sophomores, their runners being ahead from the first. All interest was now centered in the third race. The bearers of the 1912 flag started out and gained a forty-yard lead. But the next freshmen runners were clumsy at the barriers, and were perhaps too excited to do their best. The 1911 runners crept up, and they won the race by as great a lead as the freshmen had started with.

The points now stood five to one in favor of the sophomores, and every member of the class was happy. Whatever the outcome of the next event they had won the contests.

The last event, the push-ball contest, was held immediately after the races. The classes lined up five yards from the huge ball, and at the starting gun, fired by "Germany" Schulz, the fight began. Although the sophomores were greatly outnumbered by freshmen, they fought with a vim, and the first-year men were able to score but three points in the alloted time.

CAN YOU BLAME HER?

"Chuck" Boucher: (In charge of Professor Dow's class in History.) After a digression

"Let me see, what young lady did I call on last?" (Silence, but for the the faintest suggestion of controlled merriment in a distant corner.)

"Chuck": (Endeavoring to break the spell which is becoming oppressive.) "I think it was Miss ———, wasn t it?" That broke the spell. Miss ——— promptly denied the charge.

ME, TOO, PROFESSOR

Professor Ford was solving a rather difficult problem in one of his Math. 3 classes. He reached a certain point and became confused and asked the class to wait a moment.

Just then "Trot" Gallup sang out: "I got that far professor and had to wait an hour."

WHAT DID HE MEAN?

At the Glee Club tryouts Professor Killen told one of the candidates to sing "A". After the attempt he told him it sounded like "H."

Camp Bogardus

ON the evening of July 5, 1909, hot, and tired but happy and full of grit we piled out of the well-worn rigs from Pellston on to the threshold of a new life. We had come over a road, long and tortuous and the last hill was a fitting climax to such a ride. Professor Merrick repudiated the reports that we had heard of his sufferings from the black flies by appearing and welcoming us heartily. He was seconded by that merry crew who had already spent some weeks in the wilderness. As soon as Don May and Phil Kniskern saw the manly Beard that Joe Fuller had cultivated they started two of the most famous hirsute appendages that we boasted of all summer.

The camp, of which we had read and dreamed, for weeks, lay a hundred feet below us; the white tents drawn up majestically in two curved rows along the edge of the lake. The lake was beautiful as it stretched to the high green hills in the distance. We stood on Delicatessen Heights, while at our feet lay "State Street", so named by Chuck Blodgett some weeks before. The Headquarters tent stood in the center, for at that time the lecture room with the comfortable log seats was not yet in place. The Instrument tent that belonged to Mr. Brodie was ready for business and a red-cross flag fluttered over Dr. Wafer's hospital-telephone-post-office. "Faculty Row" sat on a ledge above the main camp with a clear open view from the "Front Porch". The Bug Camp lay an eighth of a mile to the east near Hotel "J. B". Our first night in those boxes of straw was not soon to be forgotten, even tho' Novy's lusty call of "Forty-four, show your light!" made us forget our own troubles for a time.

After grubbing roots for a day we got the camp in a presentable condition. "Deacon" Booth was set to work making tables and a few of us were told off to put mosquito netting on the tent doors to keep the black flies from getting out. Mr. Palmer made many a friend in those days of settling by the loan of his sharp saw and a few nails. Joe Gannett and Doug Jamieson made a classy coat rack that we all patterned after; four boards and a handful of nails. Before long we ran a line of levels to Pellston. Jack McIver led us a merry pace and when we got to the Indians' Well, we drank it dry. (??) This day we enjoyed our first of the famous lunches. Slippery Veal, salmon, pigs feet (Remember those pigs feet?), the pickles and pie together, and maybe one fork for each party.

The days of recitation and office work were the hardest excepting possibly those at "Rock Island" on triangulation. In the evenings we did our best, under the leadership of Capt. Ritze, to clear a base-ball diamond on Grape Vine Point, while Geo. Rollins headed the quoit artists. Then they built the sea wall. It was fine and looked nice until one Sunday morning Mr. Brodie, "the Spirit of '76" and "Commodore Carey" had to turn out at one a. m. to rescue the flotilla. They had a hard time with old Number 12. Roll call each morning found all hurrying except Barnes, Dewey, Dyer and Short Myers, who had only to yell out of their tent door. One day "Dad" Goddard was almost late. At the end of the first week we found that there was a material difference between our time and the Official time. However, Professor Merrick assured us that the Official time was correct so we accordingly would set our watches ahead two minutes each night to make roll call. "Tex" Bringhurst, "Joe" Fuller and "Alec" Alexander and their cord of wood were our best alarm clock. An arm-full of stove wood in your bed at 5.30 a. m. is calculated to arouse the heaviest sleepers. So time went on until "Bill" Eyke of the perpetual smile figured out that we would get home two days early at the rate the Official time was going. When his Highness heard of this he explained that his watch was exhilarated by the fine northern air and that he would see that it was checked.

Frank Packard, "Hap" Haskins and Mr. Atwell came to camp with the idea that there were fish in Douglas lake and many a weary hour they tried their luck. But the fish were as scarce as is Cheboygan County grass. One day a little whirl of wind whisked Johnny Scmutz's Stadia "Surway" out of the office tent and scattered it far and wide over the country. "Mack" Mahaney found one sheet, over which he'd burned nine o'clock oil, on the shore of Burt Lake. This same wind carried Novy's bathing trunks into the top of a neighboring sycamore. The two-piece ordinance was then in effect and as trees were cheaper than bathing suits in that locality the tree came down. Not many weeks passed before "Alec" Lund and "Rex" Pemberton had wonderful tans and the various mustaches about camp were in full bloom. "Tom" Chandler and "Dan" Walser were our fussers and much were they envied. They had friends across the lake. The only place "We" could visit was Bryant's and the "Six Oar" used to take over a load every night. It was on one of the earliest of these trips that "Remi" rescued "Ikey" Harris. Then "Snow Ball" got lost. Prof. Rheigard and Prof. Burns, Wood, Metcalf and Jack Biggers turned out to hunt for her. Some hours passed in fruitless search until "The keeper of the Midnight Oil" hoisted a lantern up our flagpole. Jack McIver and Harry Schuptrine kept the store. They kept everything from fly dope to sardines and the Saturday Evening Post. Their loose leaf ledger on the wall kept track of the bills. Some of us tried to pry that board off one night but it was "in safe". "Cass" Cassidy, who made himself famous by telling Mrs. Handy that he was "Axe and four lunches", was recorder one night when the Post came; it was 9.30 before he finished his notes, but after "lights out" Cass, undaunted, was found perched on the top-most rung of Fred's ladder under the State Street lamp, where he remained until he finished his story.

Most of us tried to wash our clothes on Sunday and were at first deluded by the rotary washer, a labor saving remnant of that effeminate civilization we had so recently abjured. But we never tried it a second time. Either no washing was done, or the clothes were just soused in the lake. And had it not been for that lake the boys would have had a bad summer. Those swims, with a cake of soap, in the cool of the evening gave us new heart for the day's work to come on the morrow. "Tom" Chandler's launch was one of the real enjoyments of camp and further, it saved many a blistered hand on the sounding work. "Joe" Dahill, "Sure jho!", was the hero of the song fests, and long will his Technology ring in our ears. One night "Don" May, "Joe" Fuller and "Lew" Kniskern got together for a little harmony but they were soon run out of the tents, taking their stand, in defiance of all, in front of the headquarters' tent. The trio were soon routed by the Law and Order League and driven up the beach to Grape Vine point where they held their ground until "Phil" Kniskern, "Tex" Bringhurst and some of the other huskies executed a flank movement and drove them into the lake.

The six weeks' men left August 13th. They were a happy crew and made life miserable for those of us who were doomed for another two weeks. "Tex" Bringhurst in particular, with his mouth organ and "Home Sweet Home" raised visions of civilization and its summer resort joys so that when after supper fifty uproarous men shook hands all around and threw their suitcases into the waiting wagons the little knot of eight weeks' men who were left were a saddened crowd indeed. After a locomotive and a U. of M., the happy bunch pulled out. A half-hearted cheer from those left behind for "Two weeks more" was immediately answered by a loud and lusty "Rah! Rah! Rah! no more." as the wagons rolled out of sight.

That night we, who had staid behind gathered about a fire on the beach and with "Prof." Rich leading we sang again the songs that the summer had imbedded in our hearts. "Julia, I'm goin' to rule you", "Don't bury me at all", "The moon shines bright on Douglas lake" and many another favorite floated out over the lake. We sung Michigan's songs on the intercollegiate battlefield, in celebration of victory and in consolation for defeat, but in the hearts of the Civil Engineers there is no way to sing those songs again as we sang them, no thrill to stir our hearts like that of our true comradeship around the camp fire on the shores of Douglas Lake.

In Memory of Robert A. Barrier, Drowned July 26, 1909.

The Daily

The champion all-'round, sweepstakes, derby, catch-as-catch-can, Græco-Roman, go-as-you-please, liar of the known world. Upon the least provocation it can unroll the most gorgeous panorama of falsehoods hung with Venetian blinds, trimmed with chiffon puffs and shirred with dregs of turkey-red, beside which the moss-grown and bob-tailed prevarications of the amateur sound like gospel hymns. For brocaded bizarre and ornamental misstatement of facts it towers like a son of Anak above the herd of common low-down effusions of gossip.

Year in Oratory and Debate

THE record of Michigan in oratory and debate for 1909–1910, though not as good as in some years, is yet creditable.

The nineteenth annual contest of the Northern Oratorical League was held at Urbana, Illinois, on May 7th, 1909, under the auspices of the University of Illinois. The University of Michigan was represented by Fredrick B. McKay as orator and Claude C. Ritze as alternate. Mr. McKay's subject was "The College Man's Call to Service," and while he delivered it with great effectiveness, he failed to win the contest.

The first annual contest of the Michigan Peace Oratorical Association was won for Michigan by Albert H. Reynolds. The other colleges participating were Albion, Olivet, and Hillsdale. Mr. Reynolds represented the State of Michigan as well as the University of Michigan in the second annual contest of the Inter-Collegiate Peace Association which was held in Chicago on May 14th. His subject was "Justice, the Way to Peace." The other states represented were Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin. Indiana won the contest. Michigan got third place.

In the Central Debating League, the triangular system, which has proved so interesting and so satisfactory for the past three years was continued. The question chosen for debate this year was; "Resolved, that the experience of the United States has shown that a protective tariff should continue to be a national policy."

Michigan's affirmative team which debated Northwestern University at Ann Arbor on January 15th, 1910, was composed of Edmund B. Chaffee, J. Leroy Adair and Frank B. Keefe, with O. J. Meyers as alternate. The debate was very closely contested but Michigan won on better form. The vote was 2 to 1.

On the same night Michigan's negative team met the University of Chicago at Chicago. The team was composed of Alonzo T. McKean, Joseph G. Black and Sol Blumrosen, with W. J. Losinger as alternate. Michigan kept the lead in a very strong debate until the last rebuttal speech. Mr. Ferguson in an exceptionally strong close probably won the debate for Chicago. The vote was 2 to 1 for Chicago. Chicago also won from the Northwestern team. Out of the eight debates held in the League during the last five years Michigan has won six, Chicago three, and North western three.

In the nineteen contests of the Northern Oratorical League Michigan has won nine firsts and two seconds and four thirds against six other Universities; Michigan won seven of the first eight, six of which were successive victories.

In five Hamilton Contests Michigan has won one first and two seconds with nine Universities competing. Out of thirty-six intercollegiate debates Michigan has won twenty-five; Four of the five with Wisconsin; seven of the nine with Northwestern; three of the four with Minnesota; three of the four with Pennsylvania and eight of the twelve with Chicago. Eleven of these debates were won in succession and ten of the last thirteen were victories. Of the twenty-two debates in the Central Debating League, sixteen have been victories. This is the record among the large Universities, both as to the proportion of debates and oratorical contests won and as to the number of consecutive victories.

University of Michigan Union

THE sixth year in the life of the Michigan Union is rapidly becoming history, and a brief glance backward over the year's work not only encourages us to further efforts but also impresses us with the great needs of the organization which are growing more and more urgent.

Six years ago the Union had its inception and the movement has been steadily growing. There is no need to recount the history of the Union—how its founders planned and worked and passed down to us their ideas, and how finally those ideas were in part realized when two years ago the Union was able to buy a home, the Cooley property on State Street. Since that time the Club House has been the center of the Union's activities. Numerous class and society banquets and smokers have been held under its roof; it furnished a meeting place for campus committees and the Student Council meetings are held there. This year has been an active one in the Union, though for various reasons the membership fell off a little. The sixth Union Dinner was notable for the great number who attended, over eleven hundred alumni and students being present, and for the excellence of the speeches.

Just before the Christmas vacation the third annual opera, Koanzaland, was presented before packed houses and netted the Union about twenty-one hundred dollars. A series of well attended membership dinners and a successful bridge tournament have been given during the winter and it is hoped that an innovation in the shape of a tennis tournament will be introduced this spring. The Cafe and quick lunch room have been well patronized and the building has been used more by students as a lounging place than ever before. Two of the younger faculty men have been holding delightful Sunday afternoon teas in the parlors, and it is expected that next year this idea will be carried out much more fully.

But the Union is now face to face with the fact that its present quarters are entirely inadequate. In the clubhouse as it is now, there is really not a great deal to attract the students. The building is too small in every respect. Its dining room will not accommodate a good sized class banquet, and although many smokers and small banquets are held there, yet there would be much more use of it for these purposes if the rooms were larger. The parlors are far too small, and as far as regards such attractions as billiards, pool and bowling, the Union offers practically nothing. The Union has now reached a point in its history where there must be a great forward movement. The novelty of a clubhouse has worn off and the lack of necessary facilities is becoming a rapidly growing handicap. This simply means that if the Union is to accomplish in any measure its great aims, it must have a new clubhouse. "For Michigan Men Everywhere" is its motto, and to enable it to live up to this motto a club house worthy of this University is absolutely necessary. Realizing the pressing need, this year's board of directors are starting the campaign. To build a Michigan Union Clubhouse which shall be second to no college club in the country is the aim of the Directors. The best is not too good for Michigan and a club house that will stand for generations as a home for all Michigan men is the aim of the present campaign. It is felt that only through such a building can the Union fulfill its high ideals of uniting in one great body the different elements on the campus and of giving to Michigan men everywhere a place to which they can return and feel that it is their own. The plan has not been worked out in its details, but an attempt will be made to reach every alumnus and give everyone an opportunity of helping the campaign. It is intended to put up a clubhouse that will cost in the neighborhood of a half million dollars, and to provide for the running expenses an endowment fund of something like three hundred thousand dollars will be needed. This means the raising of eight hundred thousand dollars, and it is hoped that through the united efforts of the alumni and the student body such a sum can be received.

A great banquet and dance hall with facilities for converting it into a small theatre, commodious smoking and lounging rooms, well fitted reading and card rooms, an ample dining room, a number of billiard and pool tables, a big swimming tank, and plenty of bowling alleys—these are some of the attractions planned in the new building.

The Union is surely worthy of such a building, and the good it will do to the University is simply incalculable. The result would be a firmly united body of graduates and undergraduates all working together for the good of our University.

The Managers of the Nineteen Ten Michiganensian take this opportunity to thank all those who aided in making this book what it is.

It would be hard to mention each individual and the work he or she has done.

The Seniors who aided us were helping to publish their class book and we trust it has been as pleasant work to them as it was to us. We thank them for the spirit shown. As to the underclassmen, their services have been invaluable. The office staff has done splendid work and we hope that their reward will come later. Howard Earl Hoover deserves special mention for the splendid work he did with the camera.

Our last wish is that each and every one who aided us will receive the same satisfaction in seeing the completed book as we shall.

Those who have not helped in the making of the book must look it through. The rest of us are quite familiar with its contents and have paid the penalty.

The Men Who Lead Are The Men Who Read

In these days of keen competition and rapid development, the successful engineer must keep constantly in touch with current progress in his line of work; he must know what other engineers are doing; what new problems are being solved; what new methods are being adopted; he must read the leading paper in his field.

The Leading Engineering Journals are:

Electrical World

Engineering Record

Electric Railway Journal

These papers are all published weekly.

Regular price for each, $3.00 a year.

They are the standard authorities in the fields of electrical engineering, civil and mechanical engineering, and electric railroading.

Repeating Shotguns

USED IN THE U. S. ARMY.

The U. S. Army authorities know a gun; that is why, when they decided to equip some troops with repeating shotguns, they selected the Winchester in preference to all other makes. The experts of the U. S. Ordnance Board also know a gun; that's why, after submitting a Winchester Repeating Shotgun to all sorts of tests, they pronounced it safe, sure, strong and simple. If you want a shotgun—buy the one whose strength and reliability led the U. S. Army authorities to select it and the U. S. Ordnance Board to endorse it—that's the Winchester.

D&C

MODERN MARINE MARVELS

All the important ports bordering on the waterways from Buffalo to St. Ignace are reached regularly by the excellent service of the D. & C. Lake Lines.

The ten large steamers of this fleet have all the qualities of speed, safety and comfort. Every boat is of modern steel construction, propelled by powerful engines and is equipped with every known safety device. The cabins are elegantly appointed and luxuriously furnished, all the staterooms are large and comfortable, and the cuisine is of the best quality.

The steamer City of Cleveland is latest addition to the D. & C. lake lines. This new steamer is the masterpiece of modern marine architecture. For the needful combination of greyhound speed, luxurious equipment and the highest factor of safety, this steamer is without a peer on the fresh waters of the world.

The City of Cleveland cost $1,250,000.00; is 444 feet long, 96 feet 6 inches wide, and seven decks high. A three cylinder compound engine of 8,000 horse power furnishes the motive power.

The 500 staterooms are all equipped with telephones, running water and washed air ventilation. The private parlors of elegant design, have baths and shower baths, some even have little private verandas.

Features which distinguish the City of Cleveland from all other lake steamers are passenger elevators, 1,000 ton water bottom, sprinkling system, bow rudder, wireless telegraph, convention cabin, mammoth open fire place, and steadying tanks to prevent sea sickness.

This City of Cleveland with nine other palatial steamers of the D. & C. Lake Lines operate daily trips between Buffalo and Detroit, Detroit and Cleveland, four trips weekly between Toledo, Detroit and Mackinac, tri-weekly between Cleveland, Put-in-Bay and Toledo, and two trips weekly between Detroit, Bay City and Saginaw.
